A New Ford Empire
Milburn Conquers Age
Wall St. Wild and Gay
—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1927, by Star Co.)

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT spent his seventieth birthday yesterday with his family in Quebec. He is a good American, a just and learned judge, a good natured man liked by more than a hundred millions of his fellow citizens.

If, like Theodore Roosevelt, he had given all his thoughts and good ideas direct to the people, instead of telling them to friends only, he would not have been beaten for president the second time.

The London Evening News got excited yesterday and used a seven-column headline on the news that "Henry Ford plans to spend $40,000,000 on a rubber empire" to compete with the present British monopoly on rubber. Henry Ford, it is alleged, will extend his land holdings in rich rubber land of Para to 2,500,000 acres. That will amuse Ford. He is busy with things nearer home than Para.

Americans beat the British at polo, easily the first game, less easily the second. Three of the four American players are past forty years of age. Milburn, the captain, backbone and keystone of the team, is forty-six, born in 1881.

That Americans nearly fifty years of age, playing the hardest, most exhausting dangerous game, can beat younger men, the pick of Great Britain, is more important to the country than any athletic victory. The British can find consolation in Milburn's victory, for John Milburn, his father, was born in England.

Wild, gay times in Wall street yesterday, poor bears wondering if higher and higher prices will go on worrying them forever. General Motors, which some poor geese were selling recently at 225 "for a quick turn," closed at 267¾. They got the quick turn.

United States Steel went up four points to 185⅝. Call money dropped to 3½ per cent., many stocks "went wild," spouting up new high prices, and so forth and so on. But don't gamble, you can't win at that.

Chicago's hot wave, having killed several, traveled Eastward to New York, creating a September 15 high weather record for all time in the big city. New York has complained for months of too

Isadora Duncan's First Romance

(Fred Toye, of the Boston Evening American staff, was an intimate friend of Isadora Duncan for seveiem years and for seven years directed her theatrical appearances in this country and Europe. Here is the second installment of his ajmdidly told story of her unparalleled life.)

THE LIFE AND LOVES OF ISADORA DUNCAN
By FRED TOYE.
CHAPTER 2.

THE Duncan family was installed in a tiny apartment in Munich. Isadora, at the time, was in her late teens. Her life up to now had been drab, miserable, filled with petty compromises with poverty.

The old days of her childhood in San Francisco; the struggling onward march to Chicago and the ultimate goal of New York were far in the background. Cold and hunger had assailed the mother, the two girls and their two brothers in the wretched London studio to which they came from off a cattle boat.

ASK SECRET INQUEST IN BLAIR MYSTERY DEATH

New Bedford, Sept. 16.—Assistant District Attorney Edward J. Harrington announced today that an inquest will be held over the death of Gordon S. Blair, former Annapolis cadet, who was shot under mysterious circumstances shortly after taking out a $50,000 insurance policy.

"I will go before a district court judge late today and request him to set a date for an inquest, preferably Monday or Tuesday," said Harrington, after a conference with Chief Inspector Walter Almond of the detective bureau.

Members of the Blair family and others living in the same home in Lincoln street, where young Blair met his death, will be summoned to testify, he said. The inquest will be secret.

Blair's insurance policy provided for payment of $25,000 additional in case of accidental death. He was shot through the heart and the medical examiner's report was "death is probably accidental," but police and insurance officials have been quietly investigating.

"Suspicious circumstances warrant an inquest," the assistant district attorney said in explanation of his

IRISH AIR CHIEF IN 'PRINCESS XENIA'

London, Sept. 16 (I.N.S.).—At 4:20 o'clock today the transatlantic plane, Princess Xenia, was well out over the Atlantic, bearing due west for Newfoundland. The plane passed over the Renmore coast guard station on the west coast of Ireland at 3:30. Reports indicated the fliers were experiencing good weather.

Dublin, Irish Free State, Sept. 16. (AP).—Captain R. H. MacIntosh in his plane, the Princess Xenia, hopped off today from Dublin on a transatlantic flight to New York. He is accompanied by Commandant James C. Fitzmaurice, head of the Irish Air Service.

The plane made a splendid takeoff getting into the air at 1:39 p. m. local time (8:39 a. m. Boston time). It carried a heavy load including 720 gallons of gasoline and a good supply of food and water.

SAY CITY COUNCILLOR IS 'MATTRESS VOTER'

Demand was made on the Boston Election Commissioners today for a full public hearing on a complaint that Dr. Seth Arnold, city councillor from Ward 4, is a "mattress voter" in this city, and in reality a resident of Belmont.

Dr. Arnold is campaigning for re-election and is the favored candidate of Charles H. Innes, Republican leader. The Back Bay ward, which Dr. Arnold represents, has long been known as the "Innes stronghold."

The demand for a full hearing was made by Attorney Thomas J. Barry, representing the complainants.

GOOD WEATHER FOR MACINTOSH

Halifax, N. S., Sept. 16. (A.P.).—The weather today was fair for Capt. MacIntosh's flight with a northwest wind blowing at a rate of 20 knots an hour, reports from St. John, N. B., gave conditions as clear with a 14 mile an hour wind. At Moncton, N. B., the conditions were also clear with a north to northwest winds blowing at a bearing velocity of from 10 to 15 miles an hour.

ISADORA DUNCAN'S FIRST LOVE AROUSED HER MOTHER'S ANGER

Noted Duncan Portrait ~ Ex-Kaiser Admired Her ~ Dancer's Adopted Daughter

KAISERIN JEALOUS OF STAR

Paris had failed to take notice of the eager young American girl with strange new ideas of freeing the dance of the conventional crinoline, the "tutu" and the wooden-toed slipper.

But pilgrimatic Germany, or rather art-loving Bavaria, had caught the germ of her inspiration. Franz Stuck, the painter, and his artistic and musical friends had made her one of themselves.

She came to the attention of the Kaiser of Germany, and, in consequence, to the attention of the Kaiserin, the result of which was her perpetual banishment from the sacred stage of the Royal Opera. Such is the jealousy of even mighty queens.

On the night of which we speak, Isadora was away from home, as she was on many nights these times. With increasing popularity demands upon her time had become more and more insistent. Invitations meant parties. Parties meant food, with rich cakes and solid, satisfying eatables, and eatables were not to be refused, especially when starvation-cramps were of such recent memory.

At home, alone, this night, was the mother.

The apartment was tiny and cheap, but it was not too tiny to provide a corner for an altar, and funds were not too pinched to spare enough to deck that altar with articles of devotion.

Before the altar knelt the mother. Her soul was given to prayer, while her mind, perhaps ran the gamut of excited imaginings. Dancing visions of little Isadora's future. Terror of the men who hovered about the child in ever-increasing throngs. Rapid calculations of income that must be stretched to cover present needs and past debts. Cogitations on the needs of the larder and the wardrobe.

HER MOTHER'S PRAYER

Through the kaleidoscope of flashing thoughts, there emerged a single purpose, a fervent hope put into the words of prayer.

"Blessed Mother of Heaven, help me to lead my child in the path which she should tread. Guide her soul in heavenly ways.

"Sacred Heart of Jesus, give to my child Thy chaste spirit. Keep before her always the love of purity and faith."

Remnants of remembered ritual mingled with every-day phrasings as the mother yearned at the altar over her daughter's future. Black of the satisfaction and relief that had come with comparative financial ease, there lurked a fanatical fear of the devastating effect of the men with whom Isadora was obliged to come into contact in her professional career.

Rightly, the mother kept the men-hungry hordes at bay. Barred were her doors to thrill-seeking theatre hangers-on. The home was a family shrine, and against the Roman rule of her mother, Isadora never thought to rebel. Meekly she pursued her business, denying herself to those men whom her parent ordered her to frown upon.

ACTED AS CHAPERONE

But every lute has its rift. Every Achilles his vulnerable heel.

One lad there was who appeared "harmless."

A mere artist, without any exact leaning except in the direction of sarcastic criticism of the stage and its players. So impersonal was he, so all-possessed by his own visions, so unaggressive and shy in the direction of the female sex, that the fond mother of Isadora took him to her bosom.

Endowed, in her woman's mind, with negative qualities, the youth had free run of the establishment. Gradually the mother had permitted household affairs to keep her at home, with the young artist substituting as trusted chaperone of the young dancer upon her excursions into the world of the theatre, art and society of the Bavarian capital.

What more need be said?

Perhaps they thought it was the corner of a new moon shining through a hilt-topping tree, Isadora and her swain.

SOON LEARNED TRUTH

Perhaps they thought it was the communion of two souls with a single vision of the One-ness of Art.

Perhaps they thought it was the fulfillment of the immutable laws of Mother Nature, culminated in the bosom of that Mother.

A modern motorcycle policeman would have entered it upon a station house blotter in terms that are never used in the columns of a respectable evening family newspaper.

The mother was not long in learning the truth. It was long after all of Munich was blatting about it, true, but soon enough to send her flying back to the lares and penates of her family altar.

This time it was not the humble prayer of a fearing and trusting mother for her beloved child.

Now it was the raging of the female robbed of her young. The raving of the love-sick mother who finds her heart's desire snatched into the arms of the seductive male. It was the old battle of the sexes warring in a fond mother's breast.

There before the altar, now transformed to a monument to the avenging and terrible God Jehovah, the mother brought down denunciation, curses, maledictions involving the most complex punishment of the sinners.

Their days should be filled with sorrow. Their offspring should languish and die at the moment of their greatest hopefulness. The sinners' lives should be heaped heaven-high with sorrow and tragedy. Ingratitude, scorn, misery, sickness and death should darken their footsteps. Life should turn to cold ashes, and song should freeze in their throat.

Ah! Woe! Woe!

Like some terrible figure from a Greek tragedy, the woman poured her grief and her anger out upon the candle-lit images of adoration.

With such a blessing Isadora Duncan and Gordon Craig embarked upon their romance.

(See tomorrow's Boston Evening American for the third installment of "The Life and Loves of Isadora Duncan.")

THE ISADORA THAT THRILLED ALL

This portrait of Isadora Duncan, whose tragic death at Nice ended a stormy career, is the work of Franz Karlbach, famous German artist, done at the time she fell in love with Gordon Craig.

BARRED STAR

The former German Kaiserin had the Royal Opera House in Berlin barred to Isadora when the former Emperor took too great an interest.

FORMER KAISER

The ex-German ruler became greatly infatuated with Isadora Duncan, as is revealed in Fred Toye's story of the dancer's life.

ELLEN TERRY

As the mother of Gordon Craig, Isadora's first sweetheart, the noted actress came into the life of Miss Duncan, as the dancer met her first success.

M'INTOSH IS FAR OUT OVER SEA ON N.Y. HOP

Just prior to taking off Captain MacIntosh saw a black cat which he picked up remarking: "This is certainly an omen of good luck."

He said he would head for Newfoundland and thence for New York, expecting to make the flight in 26 hours. "With good luck we shall do it," he said.

The Princess Xenia passed over Marlborough, Queen's County, at 1 p. m., Boston time.

At 3:30 p. m. she was sighted over Galway Bay going steadily. Galway Bay is approximately 115 miles west of Dublin.)

She was traveling almost 100 miles an hour. She was flying comparatively low and the roar of her engine could be plainly heard.

CHEERS AND BLESSINGS.

The weather was favorable and hundreds of eager faces were turned skyward as blessings mingled with cheers followed the adventurous airmen as they steered toward the Atlantic.

Many in the crowds had witnessed the passage of the St. Raphael out to sea over Galway Bay and fervent hopes were expressed that this voyage might have a happier ending than that of the other British plane.

The Princess Xenia's second escort plane turned back before reaching Galway, the first having put back about 30 minutes after leaving Dublin.

The fliers were in danger of being mobbed by admirers who crowded about them and their plane to deluge them with congratulations on their pluck and best wishes for success on their venture as they prepared to take off.

Finally, Fitzmaurice, breaking away from the friendly crowd, turned to MacIntosh, saying:

"Come on Mac, let's get on this machine and get a bit of peace."

Fitzmaurice embraced his wife and little daughter who stood by to wave their handkerchiefs as he entered the plane.

The crowd cheered lustily with loud cries of "Good Luck" as the Princess Xenia, named for the Russian wife of an American millionaire, gracefully took the air, after running 500 yards across the Baldonnell Field.

Fitful gleams of sunshine fell on the blue fuselage and brown wing of the Fokker monoplane as it sped away, the crowd remaining to cheer in an enthusiasm that could no longer be communicated to the airmen.

MacIntosh carried no radio equipment to record his progress, but took a rubber boat with two paddles on board and believes he can leave his craft in this boat if he is forced down.

MUCH LIKE OLD GLORY.

The plane is the' same type used in the passenger service between London and Amsterdam and almost a duplicate of the lost Old Glory, except for motor and color.

Distinguishing marks on the plane are its name, "Princess Xenia" and the letters G-EBTS, the license marking.

The "Princess Xenia" is a standard, single motored Fokker monoplane, its fuselage blue and its wings brown. Its fuselage is 49 feet long, its wing spread 63 feet four inches and it has a Bristol Jupiter 450 horsepower motor. Its weight empty is 4,100 pounds, and loaded 10,000. It's cruising speed is 100 miles an hour and its gallon capacity 740 imperial gallons.

"I have every confidence in the success of our attempt" said Captain MacIntosh just before the hop-off.

"We have made every possible test of our machine and the weather report is better than we have had in a long time and as good as we can expect. There's a north wind

NEW ENGLAND IS MAKING BIG GAINS IN INDUSTRIES

SEASON'S FIRST SHOT

COUNCIL TOLD OF THE NEED OF DEVELOPING NEW PRODUCTS

Poland Springs, Me., Sept. 16.—New England has gained heavily in the number of new industrial firms started since 1926. This was one of the features in the preliminary report of the first study ever made of the migration of industry in this section and presented today by the committee headed by Colonel Frank Knox of Manchester, N. H., regional director of Hearst publications, at the anniversary meeting of the New England Council at the Poland Springs House.

Returns from 135 cities and towns representing half the population of the six states showed 194 new industries to 70 lost.

MUST FIND NEW PRODUCTS.

"Of that seventy," the committee headed by Colonel Knox reported, "forty-five were business failures and 25 removed from the community. Of these, only six left New England."

President John S. Lawrence told the council that New England industries must develop new products and new methods best adapted to present production and sales organizations. They must do this if they are to meet the rapidly changing conditions that are now taking place in business," he declared. President Lawrence advised communities to realize the greater possibilities of promoting industrial growth through new products than by attracting migrant industries to their cities.

RECREATION CAMPAIGN.

Recommendations for further development of this section's recreational resources included a proposal that a campaign be started to lengthen the Summer vacation season in New England. The committee on recreation, which was headed by Hiram W. Ricker, advocated an extension of co-ordination in advertising which started this year. The committee on research, of which A. Lincoln Filene of Boston is chairman, recommended a great-

FLEES ATTACK AT 'ROXBURY DEATH SPOT'

After paralleling, excepting for a fatality, the attack upon Maybelle Matheson in a lonely field off Baker street, West Roxbury, a similar attack by a man on Marion Darling of Gretter road, in the same section, started squads of police on a hunt today for her assailant.

The Darling girl managed to escape the man only by a desperate battle and by screaming frightened him away.

So sudden was the attack and so speedy the attacker's departure that the 17-year-old girl could give the police only a meagre description of the man, save that he seemed to be very young.

QUIZ GIRL ANEW IN SLAYING OF NUTTALL

Providence, Sept. 16.—Miss Gertrude Lee, twenty-three-year-old companion of Gilbert Nuttall, twenty-six, when he received his death wound in Quaker lane on the night of last August 12, was grilled anew today by Attorney-General Charles F. Sisson.

The questioning took place in the courthouse, with Chiefs of Police Cranston of Warwick and Harriop of West Warwick present.

With Miss Lee when she entered the room and when she emerged was a man who said he was acting as her counsel.

Miss Lee's grilling came after declaration by investigators that they believe Nuttall was shot with his own gun.

The youth had two guns, the police have learned, and only one of these—a Mauser automatic which has not been fired for many months—has been found.

The authorities also declare they are convinced Nuttall had his second gun in his car on the night of the fatal shooting, although no trace of it has been found.

Following long search in the vicinity of Centerville Gate road, where the shooting occurred, and also in Quaker lane, where residents heard Nuttall and Miss Lee in heated argument, police decided the gun was either secreted elsewhere or thrown away in the Pawtuxet River.

An attempt to search the bottom of the river near the Centerville bridge may be made.

It is considered unlikely that there will be an inquest at present, as the authorities do not wish to "show their hand" to any persons who may be interested in hiding the facts of the crime, but the evidence being gathered may be presented eventually to the Kent County Grand Jury.

Nuttall was said to be torn between a desire to marry and duty to his mother. He was the chief support of his mother, but his remarks to friends indicated a desire to marry. His pay was small.

PRIEST PLAYS SLEUTH, NABS SUSPECT

Lynch, a curate of St. Raphael's Church, West Medford, who stood guard over his poor box for five days, was rewarded by the apprehension of three youths who, police charge, have for a year been robbing the poor boxes in Roman Catholic churches in the Boston diocese.

Father Lynch combined his duties as a priest with those of a detective and joined with Medford police in capturing a Malden youth in the act of looting the box. Through the captured youth the names of his pal companions were learned. They are said to be members of prominent Malden families.

Though actual arrests have not been made, police said the boys

OFFICER AIDS MOTHER OF 11

The pleadings of Liquor Officer Joseph Dawson of Station 11, who had assisted in arresting her, won leniency today in Dorchester district court for Mrs. Theresa Malaguti, mother of 11 children.

On the recommendation of Officer Dawson, Judge Joseph R. Churchill fined the woman $50 for keeping and exposing liquor for sale, and gave her two months in which to pay.

With Liquor Officer John Kelly, Dawson raided the woman's home, two gallons of distilled spirits being seized. He asked for leniency because of her large family.

Two days ago Dr. Bernstein performed a plastic operation on both of the "million dollar legs" in Englewood, N. J., where Miss Bailey is visiting relatives. This operation was on the lower tendons and muscles

ENGLAND CAN'T RELY ON CANADA'S LEAGUE VOTE

Geneva, Switzerland, Sept. 17 (A.P.)—What effect the election of Canada to a non-permanent seat in the League of Nations Council will have upon the procedure and policy of that body was a topic of discussion today.

For the first time in history, as the result of yesterday's balloting, the British empire has two votes in the league's governing body, but close observers of the dominion's policies predict that the two will not always vote as one, and that there is no reason for uneasiness over the new situation.

The Irish Free State was an eleventh hour candidate for a council seat last year, and received but ten votes. Canada now achieves a seat with just one vote to spare.

It has been noted with some amusement in past years that the Canadian and even the Irish delegates spoke in French instead of English in order to have a little fun with the mother country, and that in conferences under league auspices where no general question of empire policy was at stake their representatives frequently lined up against those of rest Britain.

BETTY ALDEN'S SOCIETY COMMENT

Paul Drummond Rust of Commonwealth Avenue Marries Hannah Holladay McEwan in Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York,

YOUNG MEN FROM SEVERAL CITIES CAME to town early in the week to be house guests at the Paul Drummond Rust establishment in upper Commonwealth avenue, and to help Paul Drummond Rust, Jr., celebrate his farewell-to-single-blessedness dinner on Tuesday evening. Today young Mr. Rust and Miss Hannah Holladay McEwan are wed with due solemnity and magnificence in the Chapel of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church over in New York, with a reception of lavish detail in the Hotel Ambassador's Italian Garden.

NEXT AFTER THE BRIDE, MISS HELEN RUST of Boston is in the limelight as honor maid, and, being petite and sweetly attractive, will decorate the bride's entourage most satisfactorily. Miss Rust came out with last Winter's bevy and moves in the younger feminine inner circle of smartness defined by the Junior League and the Vincent Club. No one in her clique will be in the least surprised when her engagement to a young Bostonian of place is formally announced, he having squired the pretty Miss Rust most assiduously these many weeks.

VERILY IS IT THE PERIOD OF MARRIAGE and giving in marriage. Young Mr. George Wadsworth Burgess and his bride-elect, Miss Helen Lovering, are whirling through the mazes of wedding preliminaries which entail choice of a future home and blissful thought for its adornment. Mr. Burgess, after starting off his business career in faraway Texas, has now a Boston connection so that he and his bride, instead of going some thousands of miles away, will settle down to wedded bliss right near town.

HAVING ANY NUMBER OF DOTING RELATIVES to shower them with gifts, I understand that one particularly handsome remembrance for the young people is a sleek and speedy motor car, which arrived bearing the card of the bridegroom-elect's uncle. The Lovering family's ramifications are socially important, likewise the Burgess-Wadsworth-Waring line on the other side. Mr. Burgess is the son of Mrs. Guy Waring, and Eliot Wadsworth is his uncle, and a company distinctly Bostonian will be on hand when vows are exchanged.

A WEEK OF BRILLIANT SPORTS IN NEW YORK—polo and tennis and racing—is keeping Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Bristow Draper in the metropolis. As usual they are putting up at the Ritz (an apartment at the Ritz enables them to dash out to Westbury, or to the tennis, or to Belmont Park for the Autumn meeting of the Westchester Association). They were in the stands for the second thrilling International polo match, and the running of the Grand National on Saturday will find them up to the smart throng. Mr. and Mrs. Draper probably will linger at their beautiful Hopedale estate until late in the Autumn.

THOSE IMPORTANT AND MUCH FETED young newlyweds, Mr. and Mrs. Chandler Anderson, have concluded their North Shore visit with Miss Elizabeth Beal at Manchester and gone back to New York for a round of entertaining in their honor. As Miss Matilda Houghton, popular daughter of our Ambassador to the Court of St. James, Mrs. Anderson cut a wide social swathe through the very heart of London's Mayfair to high Royal favor. Her marriage, though to a compatriot, was celebrated in Westminster with splendid pomp and pageantry.

MISS BEAL WAS ONE OF THE BRIDE'S attending throng on that august occasion. She and her mother, Mrs. Boylston Beal (born a Grew and most importantly connected) plan on a long North Shore season of Autumn at its loveliest, and a stay in town through the greater part of the Winter. Spring, of course, for them means London and the season, Beal pere being connected with the American Embassy, and the Beal social position in the British capital being on the serene and topmost pinnacle.

MISS MARY AMES

Boston society girl to spend short season at North Easton before returning to the Hub for the Winter.

MISS MARIAN GRAY, FAIR NEWPORTER, IS a smart young miss sporting a smart new roadster these September days. It's a sylvan blue of swagger and rakish design, and with Miss Gray at its wheel is handled with marvellous dexterity and adds its bit of color to the prevailing Autumnal tinge. Miss Gray is the daughter of Mrs. Kenneth Budd, formerly a Burnham and one time of Boston before she became Mrs. Austen Gray. Miss Gray is one of the charming young figures on the Newport social screen.

WHETHER IN NEWPORT, Morocco, Palm Beach or Boston, Miss Mary Ames of vivacious personality and smart rigs, occupies her own share of the social limelight. The Ames villa at Newport is soon to be deserted by Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames and her family, as they plan an intermediate season at North Easton before midwinter brings them to town. F. Lothrop Ames, the son, is a young man with a taste for the seas, that he indulges by means of intrepid voyages over the Atlantic. He's just back from his latest venturesome travels. Few young men of his years have to their credit two Atlantic crossings via a 75-foot yacht, and skipper at that.

Or it may be the new "etheron," so small it makes an atom look like a mountain, traveling nearly 100,000 miles faster per second than light.

That etheron may be the missing link that explains gravitation.

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, wonders what Walker and Mussolini could have talked about. They talked of many things, including probably the best and surest ways to get and hold control of public opinion.

The late Thomas Watson, of Georgia, who won his seat in the Senate by appealing to religious prejudice, said to this writer:

"The whole secret of success in public speaking and in all politics is to remember that it is impossible to exaggerate the stupidity of the public."

Mussolini and Walker would probably say, "It isn't impossible, but difficult."

BORIS ARRIVES UNHERALDED IN LONDON

London, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Without ceremony, not even a representative of his embassy being on hand to greet him, King Boris of Bulgaria arrived from Scotland today accompanied by two equerries and a valet.

After a chat with the station master, he entered a taxicab and was driven to a West End Hotel. While in Scotland he was the guest of King George and Queen Mary at Balmoral Castle.

King Boris' taxi riding is being featured in the papers it being recalled that when Mayor James J. Walker of New York arrived at the same station from Ireland the New York Mayor rode to his hotel in a gilded coach with two prancing bays and a footman.

Balmoral dispatches said Boris was expected to resume his incognito as Count Rilaid for a visit to London, and that royal matchmakers were speculating as to whether he would find a wife on his present tour.

The "Loneliest King" is thirty-three, tall, slender, dark complexioned, and apparently cares more for sports than for society.

MONKEY SHINES PLAY HAVOC IN TWO CITIES

Have you a little monkey in your home?

If not, and you desire one, Angelo Beretta of No. 676 Somerville avenue, Somerville, will gladly oblige. Angelo has caught a monkey and, like the man who caught the bear, he can't let go.

It is believed to be the same simian which disorganized North Cambridge police station yesterday, eventually escaping through a window while stalwart officers, between gasps of exhaustion, called on high heaven to witness their threats.

MONK GETS AWAY.

The monkey—age, sex and previous condition of servitude unknown—made its public appearance early in the morning in a tree near the North Cambridge carhouse.

To the delight of commuters, it performed gymnastic stunts and aesthetic dances until someone telephoned the police. Officers arrived in force and exercised their wiles and ingenuity.

As they had no hand organ the monkey refused to listen to them, and after a time went away from there by way of trees. The wagon, loaded with officers, followed (not up the trees), but was soon outdistanced and the police abandoned the chase.

A shot time later came a call from Porter square, where "Jocko" was again performing. The police responded with like results, and so on through the day, with the monk playing the leading role in a comedy which added much to the gayety of Cambridge.

COMES RIGHT IN.

At dark the weary officers gave up, so the monkey carried the war into the enemy's country. Patrolman Henry Lorgenton was sitting alone in the guardroom, thinking of this and that. When Jocko hopped to a window sill from a nearby tree.

With a wild war cry, Officer Largenton sprang, and in his triumph he cried: "I've got the monk!"

He spoke too soon. Jocko drifted easily out of reach, and then began a mad whirling around the guardroom in which the simian had all the best of it.

The joint panting of Officer Largenton, mingled with an occasional crash and stifled mutterings, attracted the attention of Lieut. William Ginty in the front office. Appearing at the door he took in the situation with a glance, and sprang for the open window.

Again Jocko's mental functionings were faster, and he slipped out of the window a fraction of a second before the lieutenant closed it.

Early today Beretta telephoned to Lieut. James M. Harmon at Somerville headquarters that he had caught a monkey, and wished to know what to do with it. The monk, he wailed, was no bargain, and he would relinquish it joyfully. He said it sneaked into his house while he was asleep, and most of the furniture was wrecked in catching it. He was told to hold it for a possible owner.

BOOTLEGS KILL CHEMIST FOR REFUSING FORMULA

Baltimore, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—The third murder within less than a month to be attributed to bootlegs has been revealed by the discovery of the headless body of J. Athey Kerner, 22-year-old chemist and graduate student of Johns Hopkins University.

It was found in a State forest reserve near here by a boy camper. One of Kerner's friends, Edward A. Rupp, declared he believed the chemist was murdered by bootlegs, to whom he had refused to give a formula for removing the poison from industrial alcohol.

'A Greater Moller's!

If you were asked the question—"Which is the best furniture store for me?"—you'd probably say — "The store where I get the best merchandise at the best price; where they're interested in me, at least as much in themselves and show it."

Such a place is Moller's. Because we know just how you feel about it, we examine ourselves critically to see where and in what way we're coming short of your reasonable expectations.

As to merchandise, we're satisfied. We know that nobody has any better goods than ours, because there are none better made. As to prices, we know that ours are right for the kind of goods we sell. If you find lower prices anywhere, you may expect lower quality.

As to the "feel" of the place, and the spirit of service, let our actions speak for us.

The new and greater Moller's now being completed, corner Massachusetts Ave. and Douglass St. (Central Sq.), Cambridge, is but another milestone in the service of progress!

FRANCE GIVES BIG WELCOME TO LEGION

bor of Cherbourg at 4 o'clock this morning.

Screaming sirens and whistles, a cordon of six French cruisers and a circle of roaring seaplanes greeted the great liner as it steamed into the harbor. Four hours later the Leviathan dropped anchor and the headquarters staff of the Legion stepped off the liner onto a waiting tender.

The second invasion of the A. E. F. had begun.

Despite the early hour, thousands of persons lined the quay as the ship docked. Two French destroyers and the United States cruiser Detroit swung at anchor nearby, gayly beflagged in honor of the visiting Legionnaires, while bands on board played the Marseillaise and the Star Spangled Banner.

Sailors lining the deck-rails of the vessels cheered a welcome to the visiting Legionnaires.

The headquarters staff left the Leviathan at 5 o'clock and the Legionnaires began to disembark soon after.

Before the Legionnaires disembarked from the Leviathan, they were addressed by General John J. Pershing.

"We feel we are among our own people," he said. "We are not coming among strangers, but coming to greet old friends and recall olden days that saw us stand together in the greatest task to which we were ever sent."

On the way to the quay, aboard a tender, the "Forty and Eight" band of Greenville, O., played the A. E. F.'s favorite songs, "Hail! Hail! the Gang's All Here," "How Dry I Am" and "Over There."

Many of the Legionnaires made a wild scramble for the bar in the maritime station immediately upon reaching the quay. The bar was soon lined six deep with Americans.

The prefect of the Manche Department officially welcomed the visitors in the maritime station. He expressed his honor and pleasure at greeting the Legionnaires on French soil.

General Pershing spoke in reply:

RECALLS THE WAR.

"It would be very difficult for you to realize the emotion that fills our hearts at the reception you have accorded us here. This occasion brings us very tender memories. I recall our arrival here ten years ago under very different circumstances."

General Pershing then recalled the wartime sacrifices of France and America.

Huge signs reading "Welcome American Legion; Welcome to Our Comrades in Arms" were hung throughout the city.

Crowds lining the sidewalks and leaning from doorways and windows cheered Legion officials on their way to City Hall. Pretty French girls and aged women, whose eyes filled with tears as their memories reverted to the days of the war when husbands and sons marched off never to return, pelted General Pershing's automobile with flowers. The general responded to the warm welcome with smiles.

GREETED BY CHILDREN.

The days of ten years ago were re-enacted. Groups of children ran about the streets, clutching at the legs of the Legionnaires, crying:

"Les Americains! Vive les Americains!" The drum major of the Greenville band, attired in a colorful dress uniform, particularly excited the youngsters' curiosity and admiration.

Arriving at the City Hall, General Pershing was welcomed by the Mayor of Cherbourg.

The mayor then offered General Pershing a glass of champagne. Holding the glass aloft, the General said:

"I raise my glass and invite you to drink to the health and prosperity of the Republic of France, and to the strengthening of the ties of friendship which unite France and the United States."

ON TO PARIS.

Despite advance threats of radicals to break up the welcoming celebration, there was not the least sign of a hostile demonstration. Cherbourg had become all-American for the day, and the residents spared no pains to make the visitors feel perfectly at home immediately upon their arrival.

The Legionnaires milled about the station, awaiting to hear the words "On to Paris"—the same words, uttered in different vein, that called them to France ten years ago.

The trip toward Paris started at 9 o'clock when the first six special trains left the maritime station. The last one left at noon.

PRIEST HELPS TO TAKE THIEF AT MEDFORD

probably would be summoned to Malden District Court on the return from a retreat at St. John's Seminary.

The trap, which ended in the capture of the first youth, was devised by Fr. Lynch, Sergeant William Buffam and Special Officer John Kane of the Medford force. For five days the poor box at St. Raphael's, often looted before, was watched. Then, police charge, the thief appeared.

At Medford police headquarters the young man said that with two other companions he had visited the poor box at St. Raphael's so often that he could not remember the exact number of times. He made this last trip alone because he needed money and did not want to share with his pals.

Then, police say, their captive told of many other churches looted, including even the Cathedral of the Holy Cross on Washington street South End. They picked out churches in fashionable sections where the Sunday conversations were large. For more than a year they have continued their depredations.

Medford police say the youth admitted robbing the poor box several times at the Church of the Immaculate Conception in Malden, where his family and those of the other two boys worship.

Other churches he is alleged to have admitted robbing include: St. Joseph's Church, Everett; St. Joseph's Church, Maplewood; St. Francis Church, Wellington; St. Joseph's Church, Medford; St. Columbkille's Church, Revere; Sacred Heart Church, Watertown.

The three also robbed churches in Lexington, Stoneham, Woburn, Winchester and other cities and towns. The three, according to the story told the police, committed the thefts usually at the noon hour.

cast in yesterday's Parliamentary elections, with government leaders expressing confidence that the result would constitute a strong endorsement of the administration. Tabulation of the ballots will continue tomorrow, and only fragmentary knowledge of the outcome is probable before next week.

The apparent apathy of the electorate during the campaign, which was free from disorder, was contradicted by the unexpectedly large percentage of votes cast.

In consequence of statements made during campaign speeches, Eamon Heran, former brigadier-general in the Free State army, was held under the treason clause of the new public safety act, charged with inciting to murder.

Sean Murphy, deputy for Kerry, was arrested charged under the common law with falsely accusing a person of a crime punishable by law. P. J. Tuohy of Dublin, Fianna Fail organizer for Kerry, was held on a similar charge.

The balloting was quiet in Dublin.

FIGHT TO OUST KLAN FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Pittsburgh, Sept. 16 (I.N.S.)—Affidavits of a sensational character are scheduled to be filed in Federal court here tomorrow in the suit to oust the Ku Klux Klan from Pennsylvania and to throw the organization into the hands of receivers, it was learned by International News Service here today.

Counsel for former klansmen who have been ousted by the imperial wizard, have prepared affidavits making serious accusations against certain high officers and purporting to reveal the alleged inner workings of the organization.

AUTOIST WAKES UP IN TREE

Millsboro, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Branon W. Martin, Jr., West Stoughton, dozed off while driving his sedan through this town and when he awoke he found his car perched in the branches of a maple tree overhanging the Nemasket River.

On its way from the road to the maple the sedan crashed through a rail fence and knocked down a large willow tree on the river bank. Martin was unhurt, but his companion, W. Robert Blake, Stoughton, was bruised painfully.

Wins Verdict

Brattleboro, Vt., Sept. 16.—A verdict for $1,500 for alienation of her husband's affections was awarded by a county court jury to Mrs. Catherine C. Zoller against her mother-in-law, Mrs. Minnie E. Zoller.

M'MILLAN BOAT SAFE IN PORT

Gloucester, Sept. 16.—The schooner Radio, long overdue supply ship of the MacMillan expedition to the far North, arrived here today.

Members of her crew reported the MacMillan exploration ship frozen solidly in the ice for the winter, but already well supplied with a profusion of new scientific specimens and some information of hitherto uncharted territory.

A report on the explosion and fire which tore the Grenfell Mission boat, the Marvel, from the towline by which the Radio was taking her to port is to be made later by John T. Crowell, Jr., skipper of the Radio.

The Marval was picked up again yesterday by the Arvia, a Canadian ship, off Cape Breton.

After a short stay here, the Radio will proceed to Boston, where she will be turned over to the owners, the vessel having been leased for use as a supply ship by the Field Museum Expedition, sponsors of the MacMillan exploration voyage.

Captain Crowell, who is a resident of this city, left the Radio as soon as she docked, long before the earliest risers were on the water front, and went immediately to his home, but his "pals" were to give him a reception later.

proposed action. He took charge of the investigation at the request of District Attorney William C. Crossley of Fall River.

Most peculiar of all the circumstances was the finding of the death gun—an army .45 calibre automatic pistol—on the dresser in the room in which Blair died, and beside it was the empty cartridge.

Also on the dresser were the magazine clip of the pistol and oil and rags which indicated the gun had just been cleaned. The body was discovered an hour after death.

BULLET NEAR CHAIR.

Members of the family do not recall picking up either the gun or the shell, although young Blair's aunt, Mrs. Elizabeth Sumner, said she was so excited when she and her niece, Mary Blair, eighteen, found the body that she is not positive about what she did.

Medical Examiner Charles Shanks today denied that the bullet, which had passed through the victim's heart and out through his back, was also found on the dresser. Dr. Shanks said he picked it up near an overturned chair in the room.

There were no powder burns on Blair's clothing.

Nobody heard the shot.

This last fact is particularly strange in that William H. Manning occupied the room just over Blair's.

Manning told the police that he had heard some sort of crash shortly after he heard young Blair enter the house, but thought that he had simply kicked over a chair in the darkness.

Even the officials of the insurance company were amazed at the furore caused by their demand for an investigation of the death, though the police say that such demand would have come from them in a few days in any event.

The Blair household consists of Mr. and Mrs. John K. Blair, his parents; Mary Blair, his 18-year-old sister; Mrs Elizabeth Sumner, his aunt, and Mr. and Mrs. Manning who occupy a suite just upstairs.

The beneficiaries of young Blair's life insurance are his mother and his sister.

Manning was the only member of the household at home, as far as he knows, when Blair met his death.

The next member of the family to return was the aunt, Miss Sumner. She was compelled to go through Gordon Blair's room to reach her own, and it was she who discovered the body, and in terror, called Manning.

To Chief Inspector Walter Almond and Detective Sergeant Fell, Manning told how the body lay, between bureau and bed.

Young Blair had been out of work for some time, which was one reason why he had apparently given up his courtship of Geraldine Hem of Milton, Wellesley graduate and daughter of the late Guy A. Hem, former president of the Citizens' National Bank.

SAFETY DRIVE SPEAKER RAPS JAY-WALKERS

A crowd of several hundred persons gathered at the Parkman bandstand today to listen to Louis E. MacBrayne, general manager of the Massachusetts Safety Council speaking on the safety drive now being conducted throughout the Commonwealth.

Attacking jay walkers and advising the utmost care and attention to traffic rules, MacBrayne appealed to his audience to make the safety campaign a success. During the present week, according to his figures, 44 persons have been injured in Boston.

"And of that number," he said, "only 10 were children and only four were over 65 years of age. That smashes any claim that most of the injures are among children and old people who are either slow or careless in getting out of the way of automobiles. The large majority of the injuries are among the "jay walkers."

"Of the total number injured in Boston this week 29 were pedestrians," he pointed out. "The accidents were caused by men and women stepping out from behind parked autos into the path of traffic and neglect on their part to observe the traffic directions."

Boy scouts were stationed along the busiest down town streets again today passing out tickets to "jay walkers" advising them to attend the safety drive meetings and get some advice. The daily entertainment was again furnished in between the speeches of the campaign workers.

Winsor McKay's safety talks and cartoons have made a huge hit with the noon-day audiences. Mr. McKay is playing this week at the Metropolitan theatre. The speeches from the bandstand are being received favorably by the public, according to workers on the safety drive.

ROYAL WINDSOR FLIERS HOP OFF FROM MAINE

Old Orchard, Me., Sept. 16 (A.P.)—With Windsor, Ont., their home "port" 700 miles distant, their destination without stop, C. A. "Duke" Schiller and Phil Wood on the Royal Windsor hopped off from the beach here a few minutes after 9 o'clock, Eastern daylight time, today.

They planned to fly over Concord, N. H., Albany and Syracuse to Buffalo, thence across to the Canadian side to Windsor, where they should land in Walker Field within seven hours.

SHORTAGE OF GOLD IN WORLD IS PREDICTED

"All the world is scrambling back to gold," declared Prof. Lionel D. Edie, of the School of Commerce and Administration, University of Chicago, during his address on "Short and Long Term Commodity Price Fluctuations" at the Annual National Business Conference at Babson Park. He predicted a world gold shortage.

"The outlook for commodity prices rests upon certain assumptions," said Prof. Edie. "It assumes, for one thing, that the leading countries of the world will prefer a gold standard. This assumption is borne out by the fact that 11 countries have reverted to the gold standard since the war and at least 18 other countries are taking steps to.

"All the world is scrambling for gold.

"Another assumption is that the countries of the world will not take seriously proposals to stabilize the price level by pooling of gold reserves in spite of the shortage of gold.

"Will there be a future gold shortage? Although it is quite clear our present price trend is not due to a gold shortage, it is equally clear the world is likely to run into such a shortage. The world should now be producing at least $250,000,000 of gold annually available for bank reserves. Actually the output available for money during the next decade must certainly fall short of this mark. By 1935 the world stock of gold money will be more than half a billion dollars short of normal requirements."

The importance of the Federal Reserve Bank system in stabilization of business was stressed by C. O. Hardy of the Institute of Economics, in his address on "Progress Toward the Stabilization of Business."

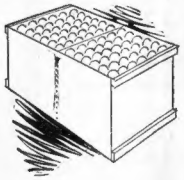
An iceless REFRIGERATOR that holds 150,000,000 Eggs



Isn't it almost impossible to imagine so many eggs? 150,000,000 of them laid end to end would reach from Boston to San Francisco, and back to Chicago again. While this may seem like a tremendous quantity of eggs to be stored, yet in reality it amounts to only about one egg per New England person per day during the period of shortage.

IN the big "Refrigerator" pictured here, approximately 150,000,000 eggs are stored annually by the trade.

Why their quality—and economy

These are spring-laid eggs—big, full-flavored, of uniform quality—produced at the time of year when hens are in their best condition—and purchased when the supply of eggs is very abundant.

And this great "Community Refrigerator," with its unvarying day and night temperature of 30½ degrees, keeps them at their original spring-time quality, until you are ready to enjoy them during this season.

Service of priceless value

Were it not for refrigeration, you would at certain times have to do without eggs. Or—pay a very high price for them. Hens are taking their "vacation" then. They do not produce anywhere near enough eggs to supply the demand.

So refrigeration performs a public service of great value. Prevents an egg famine each year. Enables everybody to enjoy nature's most perfect food at prices not unreasonably high.

Good eggs—sure to please

Try a dozen Cold Storage eggs today. You will find them good eggs — good to serve in any manner — sure to please the daintiest as well as the heartiest appetite in your family.

And they will save you money.

Your grocer sells them—order a dozen from him today.

RADIO STATION WLMB TO MOVE TO CAMBRIDGE

Washington, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Three construction permits authorizing as many radio stations to move their plants to other cities were granted today by the Federal Radio Commission. Station WLMB, formerly of Boston, will move to Brookline street, Cambridge, and will operate on 1,300 kilocycles, 50 watts.

Twi thirty-day experimental permits were issued, one to WGSH, Portland, Me., to operate on 700 kilocycles. The other to WBRL, Tilton, N. H., on 650 kilocycles.

ERNIE YOUNG AND WIFE ARE ROBBED OF $16,000

Chicago, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Ernie Young, theatrical producer, and Mrs. Young were held up in their Gold Coast apartment by two men and robbed of $16,150 in jewelry and cash.

The robbers, armed, walked into the unlocked apartment as Mr. and Mrs. Young were dining. They compelled Mrs. Young to show them where she kept her jewels, after which they tied the hands of their victims with silk stockings. Cutting the telephone wires the robbers escaped before Mr. or Mrs. Young could free themselves.

TRAIN VICTIM MAY BE SLAYER LONG SOUGHT

Bellows Falls, Vt., Sept. 16 (I.N.S.)—On a marble slab in a little country town undertaking establishment here today lay the body of a man, believed to be Frank Kierhart, one of the most widely sought criminals of the country.

Several States and the Federal government had offered rewards for his capture. No less than eight postoffice inspectors were working day and night trying to pick up his trail. One started out from St. Louis yesterday—and he eluded them all. He was killed by a Boston & Maine Rail road train on the bridge here.

Kierhart was most wanted for the brutal killing of Letter Carrier John Enz, and the wounding of a postoffice clerk and motorcycle policeman in Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 14, 1926—a crime that aroused the entire country.

The profile of the man on the marble slab bears a striking likeness to Kierhart. To clinch the identification two postoffice inspectors, one from New York city and the other from Glen Falls, N. Y., came here today with finger prints.

Kierhart, sought for eleven years, was wanted for a murder in New York city, for a gun fight in Highland Park, Mich., and for a number of postoffice robberies and holdups. His mother and two brothers live on Long Island, N. Y.

"CALL ME PLAIN JIMMY," WALKER BEGS OF FRANCE

Paris, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Mayor James J. Walker of New York will become a member of the French Legion of Honor Tuesday afternoon at a reception to be given by President Doumergue.

Mayor Walker today said that he was tired of being "Hizzoner," and longed to be just plain "Jimmy" and to where he likes without the fuss of reception or formal greetings. He sighed with relief after a good night's rest over the fact that official receptions ended at the Hotel de Ville yesterday until Tuesday afternoon's ceremony.

ONE LONG HOP LINDY'S NEW CHINESE NAMESAKE

Chicago, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Charles A. Lindbergh has another namesake. He is One Long Hop, born a few days ago in Chinatown. His Chinese parents, impressed by Lindbergh's feat, wanted to name their boy after him but they wanted a name with a Chinese ring to it. After much thought the name was chosen today.

DEDHAM GALA WEEK AS FIRST THE. TRE OPENS

Just to let the rest of Massachusetts know that Dedham is one of the live and growing communities despite its age, business men and citizens will join hands next week in a carnival to celebrate the building boom in the business section and the opening of a new theatre, the first in the town. An illumination of the business section with colored lights featuring will be one of the attractions.

The stores will also have attractive displays. The program will start Monday night with the dedication of the Community Theatre. Tuesday night there will be a parade and band concert. Friday night there will be a concert by the Tenth Regiment Band with dancing in the streets.

Saturday night there will be a concert by the Rotary Boys' Band, which will also lead the parade on Tuesday night. In addition to lighting effects, the stores will display flags, and carry appropriate decorations.

Henry M. Carey is chairman of the committee in charge of the celebration, Joseph Carlson is secretary, and Shepard Hamilton is treasurer.

2,000 DRIVERS OUT IN N. Y.

New York, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Complete suspension of trading in the downtown wholesale fruit and vegetable district was announced by the Bureau of Markets of the U. S. Department of Agriculture today as a result of a strike of 2,000 teamsters and chauffeurs.

"If the situation is not speedily adjusted no doubt a large percentage of perishable produce will deteriorate and become absolute waste with large monetary loss to growers, shippers and jobbers," the bureau said.

HARVARD KEEPS STADIUM 'AS IS'

Denial that Harvard intends this year to enlarge its Stadium seating capacity to 80,000 was made today by William J. Bingham, director of the Harvard Athletic Association.

Director Bingham declared the report to be a "perennial" one. He denied also any authorized architect had made a survey of the Stadium or the athletic sector with a view to figuring enlargements.

"Renovation and enlarging have been a problem since 1903," he said, "but it is necessary for the association to pass on any changes, and it has not done so, nor has the question been brought before it."

POLICE TOLD TO NOTIFY WOMAN BROTHER IS DEAD

Chief Charles A. Kendall of Somerville today received a telegram signed R. E. Sullivan, Sacramento, Cal., asking him to notify Mrs. Kate Crissin that her brother had passed away. The police were able to find one Crispin family in Somerville and they had no knowledge of a woman by the name given.

'PERFECT MAN' LEFT BY WIFE AS GIRL SUES

Newport, R. I., Sept. 16.—Things have been fairly dull for the last few weeks, but Newport perked up with interest today when Barton I Baldwin, hotel owner and "perfect man," broadcast in print that his wife has departed his menage.

Mr. Baldwin also advises the reading world that because of the flitting of Mrs. Baldwin, nineteen years his junior, he will no longer be responsible for her bills.

Coming on the heels of an announcement by Miss Irene M. Huebel of Revere, Mass., that she will renew her court fight to take away from Baldwin the Muenchinger-King Hotel in Bellevue avenue, willed to him in 1921 by Miss Huebel's aunt, news of the Baldwin break was the leading item of conversation today.

Baldwin married the present departed wife in May, 1921, four months after the death of Mrs. Amanda S. Muenchinger, German-born widow, who pinned the designation "perfect man" on Baldwin, and who had succeeded in amassing a fortune from her hotel which in reality was a genteel boarding house.

The girl Baldwin took as his bride was Martha J. Eckberg, a 19 year-old Swedish waitress at the Muenchinger-King Hotel, but not until after the marriage was it learned that the blonde waitress was well-educated and had come from Sweden to work for funds to get a musical education.

Baldwin, a Columbia graduate who had also tried learning at Union, Wesleyan and Yale, came to Newport originally in 1915 as tutor of young Cornelius Vanderbilt and the Harriman boys.

He took rooms at Mrs. Muenchinger's polite hostelry and so won the regard of that estimable and hard-working widow that she persuaded him after a year or so to relinquish his efforts in erudition and become manager of the hotel.

She willed him her entire estate, estimated at $100,000, although Miss Huebel, then nineteen, Boston stenographer, was Mrs. Muenchinger's niece and next of kin.

The girl has waged two court battles thus far to gain possession of the fortune.

In the first, after a verdict for Baldwin, the Supreme Court ordered a new trial on exceptions. In the second trial the jury disagreed.

Miss Huebel announced not so long ago she will renew the fight.

'WHEEL ABOUT' HUB STARTS 38TH TRIP

Six veteran bicyclists started the thirty-eighth annual Wheel-Around-the-Hub this morning from Warren and Walnut avenues, Roxbury, led by their captain, Dr. Walter N. Kendall, 72.

Amid the cheers of other members of the Boston Bicycle Club who attended in a motor bus the gallant band composed of Dr. Kendall, Boston; Fred J. Perreault, Malden; Theodore Roche, Roxbury; M. L. Bridgman, New York; Fred St. Onge, Springfield, and Charles F. Travers, Brighton, pedaled merrily out Walnut avenue, through Dedham to Canton where they lunched at Cobb's Tavern.

The wheelmen expected to reach Mansfield late this afternoon; then, after spending the night there, will resume the trip across country to Abington, Rockland and Assinippi, where the annual fish dinner will be served at Joe Hendry's. The trip will be about fifty miles.

President Quincy Kiley of Brookline, who is now in Europe, sent his regrets and greetings to the club in a letter written in verse.

Besides the competitors, the following members attended the start: Ex-Mayor Fred Atwater, Bridgeport; C. C. Ryder, Walter E. Swan, Henry H. Kell, A. G. Fisher, E. H. Morris, J. Rush Green, J. J. Faclit, Edward Hodgkins and T. N. Biddis of Elmira, N. Y.

The silver medal of the club, with an emerald for each five years of membership, was presented to Miss Gertrude Cobb of Canton, who is an honorary member of the organization which has enjoyed her hospitality at lunch annually since 1879.

BEAN HOLE BEANS

—with just the things you like best in baked beans

Brown sugar, molasses, sugar-cured prime pork and that wonderful "woods" flavor

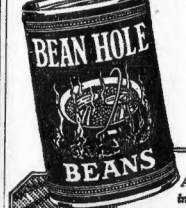
The very words "baked beans" excite the appetite. But beans baked with brown sugar, molasses, sugar-cured prime pork and flavored with the fragrances of outdoor baking in the woods—could any appetite resist!

Many attempts have been made to equal the flavor of "bean hole" beans as prepared by logging-camp cooks in the Maine woods. But until now no modern way has matched the result of the old-fashioned earthen out-door oven.

This wonderful new product, Bean Hole Beans, for the first time exactly reproduces all the eating qualities of "bean hole" beans as baked in the Maine woods.

Begin tomorrow to enjoy this newest contribution to foods of flavor—really appetizing flavor! Two sizes—medium and large.

—without tomato sauce



A flavor never improved even by countless new methods of baking beans, since the first beans were baked in an out-door earthen oven.

SLAIN DOCTOR'S WIFE IS HELD

Hammonton, N. J., Sept. 16 (A.P.). Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl, forty-one, wife of Dr. A. William Lillendahl, who was murdered in his motor car yesterday, has been asked to remain at State police headquarters here in order to assist the authorities in their investigation of the killing of her husband, who was sixty-five.

The police said Mrs. Lillendahl was too distraught to give a clear account of the killing, and they wish to question her further. Mrs. Lillendahl said two negroes suddenly appeared from the woods, jumped on the running board of the car and attacked them. Scores of farmers and all available police have been searching for the two negroes.

Dr. Lillendahl was awaiting trial in the Federal Court of the Southern District of New York on charges arising from his operation of an institution in New York for the cure of drug addicts.

PROBES FIRE IN WINTHROP

A fire of suspicious origin, which the State police were called on to investigate broke out today in the house at No. 24 Mermaid avenue, Winthrop, owned and occupied by Abraham Alpert.

The entire family was away when the fire started in the attic and burned through to the roof before being discovered by a passing When the firemen arrived the roof was blazing, and gave them a stiff battle.

On clearing away debris, the firefighters encountered a fresh fire, resulting in chief Warren H. Bo[illegible] cher notifying the State authorities. Damage was estimated at $2,000.

She Wasn't Modern and Joined Class "Men Forget"

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 16 (A.P.).—An "old fashioned girl" has proved to be, in this instance, the kind a man forgets.

She is Mrs. Ida Wagner of New Britain, Ct., who separated from George P. Wagner, New York lawyer, nine years after they were married.

Mrs. Wagner testified she made her own clothes and smoked not, neither did she drink. Her husband, she said, thereupon scolded her for not being "modern," jeered at her "home made rags" and finally left her. He did not appear at the hearing.

FORSYTH KILLS SELF BY GAS

New York, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Bertram Forsyth, actor and playwright, committed suicide today by inhaling illuminating gas in the kitchen of his apartment. Nervous depression was given by police as reason for his act.

Several letters from producers and persons prominent in the theatrical world were found among his papers. One, from the Provincetown Players, stated their intention of producing his revue "Powder and Patches."

Forsyth, who was 40 years old and an Oxford graduate is survived by his wife, now at Westerly, R. I., and one son.

HUB WATCHING FOR FUGITIVES

The escape from the Maine State Prison at Thomaston of two prisoners, who are believed to be on their way to this city in a stolen automobile, was reported to the Boston police today.

The prisoners were Henry Hughes, 29, formerly of Boston and Henry Nason, 34, the latter serving an additional sentence for a previous escape.

The men are believed to be riding in an automobile of the touring car type, with Maine registration. Hughes is described as being slim, with hazel eyes and medium complexion, weighing 157 pounds. Nason is dark, with brown eyes and is a shoemaker by occupation.

News of the escape was given to the local authorities by Stanley MacGowan, probation officer at the Maine State Prison, who came here to take back James Mc[illegible]n, twenty-two, of Bangor who recently escaped from the Thomaston institution.

Maroon was arrested on the waterfront as a suspicious person and taken to the Mick street station by Patrolman John H. Murphy. He was immediately identified as the man for whom a warrant was held as a fugitive from justice and the Maine authorities were notified.

4 CONDEMNED TO DIE IN CHAIR DENIED NEW TRIAL

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 16 (A P)—An appeal to the Court of Pardons today remained as the only hope for four men sentenced to die in the electric chair at Trenton for the murder of George N. Condit and paymaster of the Red Bird Coaling Co. who was held up in Newark on July 19, 1926.

The prisoners, all of Newark, are Joseph (Big) Joel Juliano, Louis (Kid) Rosen and Christopher Ramos. The court of pardons has already rejected an application for a new trial.

N. E. IS MAKING BIG GAINS IN INDUSTRIES

or utilization of that field as an aid to business.

President Lawrence in his address also stressed the electric power situation in New England, especially the interstate transmission for which he looked for a solution soon.

It was here, in July, 1925, at a gathering of governors, that the idea of the New England Conference was born. Since that time the leaders of business and industry of this section of the country have used the organization to bring together the combined interests of New England to promote the general welfare of the six states.

DELEGATES ARRIVE.

In connection with this eighth quarterly council session there is also a gathering of the New England Women's conference. Headed by Mrs. Grace Hoadman of Pelham, N. H., seven business men and their wives arrived here from Newark.

Two sets of resolutions are to come up for consideration in the rate and freight situation between the two sections of the country. One is the plea of the textile industry of New England and Virginia.

The report by the power committee, soon to be presented to the council meeting at the first session, recommends that New England power companies engage in a more intensive effort to develop industrial enterprises they serve.

The power compact between Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine, the most of which is to make the water power resources of Maine available to the other two States, will remain for a major part of the day's program.

BREWSTER TO ATTEND.

Governor Brewster, who is said to be considering a special session of the Maine Legislature to allow the appointment of power from that State, will be here to give his views on the compact.

A number of recommendations are expected in the power committee report which are a result of the study undertaken by the committee. The survey council did an investigation of the activities of power companies all over the United States in promoting the industrial development of their communities.

HEARING ASKED ON ARNOLD

Edward Eagh Exan is a resident of Ward 9 and former City Councilor, late from that district.

Attorney Davy inquired that a date for the hearing "not a set immediately so that witnesses can be called and his lawyer could be here too, day on which conclusion will be certified to the Boston Election Commission.

According to charges made to the election board by Exan, Dr. Arnold's two children go to the county Public School in Belmont, and they, together with Dr. and Mrs. Arnold, live at No. 24 Washington street, Belmont. Neither Dr. Arnold nor his wife ever sleep at the voting address given by the doctor—No. 93 Huntington avenue, Boston—although both are registered from that address, Exan declared.

Exan asserted that he will produce witnesses to prove that there are no sleeping quarters at this Huntington avenue address, and that he sees the doctor's office only, besides Dr. Arnold and his wife, a third person, Miss Ida Henderson, a nurse, is registered as a voter there.

It is further claimed that Dr. Arnold has not lived in Boston since 1923, although he has sent rent to the Boylston street address. While living in Watertown and paying a poll tax there, it is charged he tried to pay for his children's schooling in that town on the ground that she was a resident of Boston, but the school committee formed decision that he home was in Watertown.

The Arnold family then moved to No. 41 Dogwood road, Belmont.

FOR LOWER N. E. RATES ON SOFT COAL HAULS

The propriety of the principle that New England should have access to a supply of low volatile bituminous coal was admitted by examiners of the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington today in a favorable recommendation upon the petition of William H. Day, manager of the transportation bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce for reasonable all rail rates from West Virginian mines to all New England.

Day said the entire proposal was bitterly fought by operators of the Pennsylvania mines and by carriers serving them in a proceeding covering several weeks, and that the basis of rates approved by the examiners who sat in accord with the basis advocated, will permit the coal to move.

FRANCE OFFERS PEACE PLAN

Geneva, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—France today brought to the efforts looking toward disarmament a definite proposal calculated to enhance the chances of success of any future disarmament conference.

A resolution was presented to the League of Nations assembly by M. Paul Boncour of France intended to promote arbitration agreements for all conflicts between nations and suggesting a new conception of the Geneva protocol which would increase special security pacts. This would make the signatories contribution to any system of penalties against an aggressor nation proportionate to their geographical situation and to the bonds uniting them to other signatories.

The resolution urged the creation of a preparatory disarmament commission on which the United States would be represented, to study those guarantees of security which would permit the reduction of armaments to the lowest possible level.

SEARCH IN VAIN FOR BERTAUD

St. John's, N. F., Sept. 16 (I.N.S.).—The S S Kyle, chartered by the New York Mirror to search for its managing editor, Philip A. Payne, and Lloyd Bertaud and James D. The Kyle reported last night she was sailing east northeast over a zigzagging course, presumed to be the direction in which the fliers would have drifted if they had been able to take to their life raft.

The weather is moderate and dull.

"Must Have Goal Beyond Money Making"---Ford

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—How hard should we chase money?

Many Europeans sneer at "Yankee dollar-grabbing."

Well, do we overdo money-making, and do we overate the importance of acquiring a lot of money?

While talking the other day with the world's richest man, Henry Ford, the subject of money making and achievement came up.

"You must have some other goal in view than just making money," Mr Ford declared earnestly.

Then with a tiff apologetic smile, he added "You must actually have a passion if you want to accomplish anything worth while."

Incidentally, the world's richest individual—he may or may not be a billionaire or multi—doesn't know how much he earns at this moment wrestling with a financial problem of magnitude.

We had been talking about the much discussed new Ford car, in that it was an entirely new model we were then selling. He had been enquiring of the many improvements installed.

But it appears that the world has created a way to do the job of selling. I was told the price per unit is lower priced than any other, a remarkable "problem," he commented admirably. "It's one thing to make a thing cheap. That's right. That's easy. If you don't have to bother at all making it at a very low price. But to make it very good, to make it absolutely right and at the same time make it cheaper than anybody else, to make it at the very lowest price possible—that's the problem, that's the job we now have on our hands, that's our job."

Parenthetically: It may interest you to learn that the price of the new Ford has not yet, its maker tells me, been definitely fixed.

To return to dollar chasing after the fact that we are living in a prosperous era. Secretary Lamont's report for the year ended June 30, was devoted largely to a discussion of this subject. I am certain many people benefit much from a perusal of it.

My observation of rich men has convinced me that those who have no "mission," no objective beyond the mere piling up of dollars, reap little but disappointment and the disillusionment in the end. Candidly, that is one explanation of why some of our multi-millionaires become so lavishly generous with their gifts during late in life. They discover that the adding of extra millions tells me, been definitely fixed. fails to satisfy, fails to yield any genuine happiness. Therefore, they change their tactics.

But that applies only to some, not to the majority of our millionaires. The majority of American business leaders, it is my honest opinion, become far more interested in achievement than in the additional money such achievement brings to their own pockets. They have no ecstasy. They are to gain in the distinction of undisputed leadership. Yes, many of them love power, still more power.

If it be true that America can dollars more furiously than any other people, it also is true that they use their money more generously, more unselfishly than any other people.

Also, when you get down to hard tacks, neither the man nor the nation that fails to buckle down earnestly, industriously, determinedly to accomplish things, goes very far or is able to do very much to help others. And it is the ac-

AN OLD RESPONSIBLE HOUSE

BOSTON AMERICAN HOME BUILDERS BUREAU

DEMONSTRATION HOME READY IN FIVE WEEKS

Being Built to Demonstrate Maximum Value at Minimum Cost

(Editor's Note: As a service to the public the Home Builders' Bureau began August 1st the erection of a six-room Dutch Colonial house in Warrendale in an effort to demonstrate the kind of home which could be built for less than $10,000. The objects of this experimental home are fourfold, (1) To explain processes of building, (2) To describe materials and services required, (3) To acquaint prospective home owners with methods of financing and (4) To illustrate the possibilities of economical home ownership. Comment on the construction will appear weekly in these pages.)

Home ownership with the maximum of value and the minimum of investment may be attained equally well by purchase or by individual building. Economies possible through personal supervision and purchase of material will usually be more than discounted in the buying power of bulk, ready cut materials when it is left to many houses is able to exist.

The Dutch Colonial house which is building under the auspices of the Home Builders' Bureau conforms to the severe standards of utility and appearance and yet defi tous note to both interior and exterior and a charm, a character that is individual. It is a well proportioned house with plenty of light, well designed rooms.

The builder of this house in collaboration with Leo Hurley, is Arthur H. Whitcomb, building organization of Waltham, who have completed seventy houses in this price class during the past two years.

Readers are invited to visit this house and a group of seven others on the Warrendale property during the first stages of construction of the model home. The other homes comprise a Dutch Colonial of some what different design, a English Colonial, two English Cottages, one early New England cottage and two American adaptions from Dutch square modes.

Prospective visitors to the Saturday this number of model houses will be open for a large gathering of interested and prospective builders and want for to endow the Home Builders' Bureau in belief that a display of this kind would interest everybody.

Home planning was good some knowledge of two family houses under the five figure mark now can suit the builders without question.

With the enthusiastic cooperation of a number of selected building material concerns, construction of the model home has rapidly proceeded.

Financing was arranged through the cooperative bank system, which is in need of convenience for not all the power.

During the past week assembling and skimming has been done and the interior finish was delivered on the property today for immediate installation. Thus without undue rush, and without lagging the construction has passed the halfway mark and public opening of the completed house, completely furnished for October 2nd, becomes more and more an assured fact.

PRINCESS ILEANA SAVED WHEN SQUALL HITS BOAT

ROLAND IN CAST WITH NORMA TALMADGE

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Gilbert Roland does a repeat performance in "The Woman Disputed" as Norma Talmadge's leading man. This will make his third picture with Miss Talmadge and rather effectively settles the discussion as to where he will next park his make-up box.

Norma might be said to have made young Roland, who was unknown until he played in "Camille" and "The Dove." Now without any exaggeration I think I can say he is one of the most sought after young men in the movies. Really so, too, because in addition to his natural screen personality he has developed into a fine actor.

People in a position to know, such as Lowell Sherman, who featured Roland in "The Woman Disputed" when it had its run on Broadway, may have become tired of the screen. I suppose in fairness to Roland part will be true.

Nancy Carroll, Johnstone, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's contract writer, has been assigned by Joseph Schenck to write stories. This only carries out the contention that we shall see more McArrangement in the future between the two companies.

Lew Cody, who wrecked the megaphone in "Camille," will again direct Norma.

HERE is a laugh. Roland Drew, widely publicized by the Edwin Carewe company as a former newspaperman and a newcomer to the screen, is none other than Walter Goss. I do not know whose brilliant idea it was to cast him as Felipe in "Ramona" and then try to hide his identity, but I think whoever did it is suffering from an inflated nerve center.

Time Goss has not had much of a break in the movies, but it is the act of stupidity to try and foist him off as a discovery under a new name. Edna Carewe is old enough to know it cannot be done. He could be wise enough not to let anyone talk him into such a fool play.

Goss was formerly on a Metropolitan daily. He was one of the Paramount graduates who went to Hollywood to try and conquer the movies, and so far the obstacles have been many.

WILL R GIBS, humorist, philosopher, reporter, actor, composer, and lover of Hillsdale manor, is about to add a new accomplishment to his long list. He has been engaged by Sam Bork to write the scenario for "The Texas Steer" in which he is starred.

I think it is safe to promise that wherever there is the possibility of a laugh Rogers will get it. Yet he is not so funny as a life writer. I have known some of our best humorists to fall flat when it comes to writing screen stuff.

I WONDER what the reaction of Paramount is on James Hall. For months he was the favorite leading man and supposed Bebe Daniels' Don Negri until the other twain met. Now Jack Mulhall is being featured and no doubt is given much Paramount picture.

I have been told that he was paid $1,000 a week by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in "Lilac Time." Can it be that Paramount feels they have to suffer vacuous females for him, or is it because the Paramount stars are looking elsewhere for leading men? One never knows, I take it.

THE last minute news from the Hollywood studios is that James Herbert in "Quality Preferred" as Stafford Jr. in the romance of Lillian Rich and Jack Leslie. If you can believe everything he said to Alma Loan.

George Stone who played "Rat" in "Seventh Heaven" has been assigned to the stuff in "The Cohens and Kellys." Annie Blues next Warner classic is another. Not that, for once, we're keen to see Stone in a comedy role. "The Greatest" is shown for Lillian Gish with Irving Cummings the leading lead and Mr. Hart himself is the director.

2 ESCAPE SHOTS IN MILE CHASE

Frustrating an attempted robbery of a variety store in Meridian street, East Boston, Patrolman Daniel MacCollum today recovered a stolen truck, in which the thieves were to carry off their loot, and all but captured the thieves in a chase in which he fired several shots.

Darting through yards and over fences, after the chase had lasted more than a mile the two youths, whom MacCollum had surprised in the variety store made their escape.

The scene of the attempted robbery was the Meridian Music Store, half a dozen doors from the East Boston police station.

They had stolen the truck of John Scopi of Chelsea street and parked it near the store which they entered by...

U. S. MAY CALL REVERE CHIEF

The threat to ask the Senate Judiciary Committee to summon Chief of Police Edward J. Tighe of Revere to Washington to give the number of drunk arrests in Revere, for the last year was contained in a letter from United States Senator William Cabell Bruce of Maryland to the Revere chief.

Some time ago Senator Bruce wrote the Revere chief, asking for that data on the grounds that he wanted it for a lecture tour. Receiving no reply from the Revere Chief, Senator Bruce has again requested the figures in a letter containing the reference to the judiciary committee action.

QUICK TRIAL FOR BEACH CRIME

Lawrence Sept. 16—George Taylor was arraigned today in the Essex County Court House here on murder of Miss Hazel Mary Kelley of Salisbury Beach on the night of June 6.

Trial of Taylor over to the place at the session of Superior Court opening here Monday, although District Attorney William H. Crosby said there might not be time enough as several other important cases precede this one on the list.

The revolting crime in which the pretty Lawrence girl was killed on the sand at the Salisbury resort was a mystery for several days until it was discovered a man answering Taylor's description as to her watch to a New Hampshire pawnbroker. Later Taylor, an itinerant barber, was overtaken and arrested

A Real Drama of Intrigue in Boston Theatrical Life After Curtain

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Becky McCloskey, young, good-looking, trying to make her way alone in Boston, finds herself without a position on New Year's Eve. Dan Scarlett, who lives by his wits, sees her huddled in a doorway and persuades her to go to dinner with him. He kisses her. She slaps his face and threatens to brain him with a bottle. Becky sings a little song for him. Scarlett realizes that she has a beautiful voice and makes a bargain to finance her until she gets started if she will let him share her profits. Becky hopes to meet a man she has seen making purchases in the store where she worked. Through Scarlett's influence she joins a chorus. He makes it clear to her that he expects her to find a millionaire admirer and get what she can out of him. Becky refuses.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 5

IT was a hot night, and the long dressing room with the show girls and chorus girls crowded smelled of greasepaint and powder. Between scenes the girls changed costumes in the aisles there was no time for a return to the long room. But between acts there was always a confused bedlam—laughter, gossip, profanity.

Becky looked angrily at the arm of a thin affected blonde who had hastily resorted to powder rather than soap.

"Violet Vincent! You got my costume again!" Becky raved. "Give it to me now! Don't you dare put it on!"

"I wouldn't want to, darling," the blonde responded airily. "I'd be afraid of catching your bad manners from it."

"Well anyhow, you wouldn't catch —" the end of Becky's sentence was cut off as a slim dancing boy pushed his way into the packed room. Becky flushing, clutched her costume before her. The boy without so much as a careless glance, said:

"Here's Richard Clyde who wrote our little song you know is throwing a big studio party tonight. All the swells are in it!"

"Well, I want to be there. Trot along now. I'm busy." At that moment a voice sounded behind her—Scarlett's.

"Get into that and come outside for a minute." When she joined him in the wings "Not going to resent a party at all?" he asked. Becky shook her head resolutely. "Better change your mind!"

"I'll resent you as one flayed. "Now. Planning to stay? Want to know what I mean?" Scarlett smiled master-fully. "Becky," he said "do you still think about your ideal? True Lochinvar follow?"

"I do," said Becky. "But what's that to you? I don't ever expect to meet him. He's not a stage door johnny."

Cold Shoulder for Flat Chest! Full Bust Back in Style

By FRANCES L. BAIRD

It has come at last—that new feminine figure toward which fashion has gravitated since 1925! The full bust has arrived with the 1927 Fall modes! No more will fashion smile upon the boyish figure for it violates the cardinal principle of smart dressing—the tendency toward the natural figure.

This was the first surprise during a preliminary survey of the new modes to be introduced to Boston women in the Fall fashion show being staged next Monday in all Boston department stores.

To attain the curves which once inspired music and poetry Paris sends a new "uplift" brassiere, and some modistes even use wire artificial appliances to secure the much desired chic. Modernistic art influences everything and the gown which wins today depends entirely upon the figure which carries it.

Asymmetric lines, which are the opposite of symmetric lines, answer that harrassing "slender" question for fashion decrees that the modern woman must be slender and curved at the same time. These lines are simply diagonals from one shoulder to the opposite hip and then to the opposite knee, and are further secured by the use of two or more contrasting colors.

SMART GOWNS ARE SIMPLE.

The keynote of the Fall mode is "sophisticated simplicity," to borrow a famous French dressmaker's phrase. By sophisticated he means intricate cut and design, rather than furbelows, for really smart gowns are simple. Richness of fabric and clever manipulation spell the difference between stylish apparel and mere body drapery this season.

Knees will be covered but not by lengthened hems! The effect of longer dresses is secured by variable hem lines, some up on one side and down on the other, others up in front and down in back and in one lovely evening model the hem is in deep points.

The new silhouette is Egyptian, so the whole thing is simplified by simply studying a profile of Pharaoh's daughter.

The fabric which has swept the country is transparent velvet, a material of exquisite sheerness but very perishable. Fashion demands it faster than manufacturers can supply it and it is already a luxury fabric shown in hand made models. This lively velvet cannot be purchased by the yard in Boston, nor indeed elsewhere, because of the phenomenal demand for it by dressmaking establishments.

CHIFFON VELVET POPULAR.

Chiffon velvet is next in popular demand both for sports and formal wear. It closely resembles transparent velvet, but is firmer in texture and better adapted for tailored models. It comes in lovely prints and many of these feature the new bell buckle of semi-precious stones.

One of the curious things in all new Fall fashions is that the sports and formal modes are difficult to tell apart. Both are made up in velvet and satin, the most popular material.

Woolens, too, have returned this season in fine, soft, sheer weaves, such as the fine camel jersey, the wool georgette, fantimeer, and very light weight tweeds. Sports costumes are shunning the piece or two piece effect in two or more contrasting colors and in these shades of brown lead the mode.

As to colors this season, black and brown are having a close race, with black apparently leading in coats of the knee length. Many new shades of blue, including the Newport, Navy, and Nemours blue are next in favor with the pine needle green following.

FUR IMPORTANT.

Fur is important since the long haired variety, dyed beyond recognition, lends grace to the rich materials upon which it is used. Ensemble furs have found favor and fur coats this season appear in sealskin or snowflake weasel (Russian) with chinchilla trim in diagonal patterns and a antelope and pony with leather lapels of wool. Muskrats and Alaskan seal for formal wear and even the perennial broadtail favorite are shown by some shops.

Not for many seasons have scarves assumed such an important role in milady's wardrobe. Pearls tend but wide gold and silver bracelets of the mid-Victorian era, antique jewelry and glittering new marcasite or fine cut stone pins play their parts in completing the simple ensemble of the new models.

The well dressed woman who chooses a black gown will wear allsilk hosiery, which is a new trend, rose-beige or gunmetal with black patent leather one-strap pumps. The tendency in hose is toward the Cuban and Oxford styles. Many new shades of brown are shown for sport wear. The dress hose is of fish net.

Pull-on gloves are the mode of the hour.

And now we come to the most surprising of all—the millinery mode. New hats are brimless, skull caps with low crowns and many have a cut away from one eye or wear across the face with a feather pad on one ear. Velvet and felt and these combined are favorites with a tiny eye veil on some.

The Styles of Today

THE hair will remain bobbed but worn slightly longer to take a wide wave.

The chic Fall complexion must be a heavy coat of tan!

* * *

Bags are smaller with emphasis on the clasp, no handle and come in washable suede, antelope and tweed.

* * *

Necklines follow the individual throat contour in many new outlines, with the deep V favored for formal occasions.

* * *

Lisle hosiery may displace wool for Fall and Winter.

Elastic step-in girdles provide the proper restraint for the new "molded figure."

* * *

Smooth fabrics, such as suede, broadcloth, velvet and velveteen develop the new cloth coats. The fur collars and patch hem trim are of dyed skunk, muskrat or fox.

Shoulder sashes and diagonal drapes give the new "unbalanced" effect in dresses.

* * *

Finger tip length tunics find favor this season.

LEO FLYNN DEFENDS SYSTEM

Tunney Camp Adopting Same Measures, Says Dempsey's Manager

By LEO P. FLYNN
Manager of Jack Dempsey
(Copyright, 1927, by Universal Service.)

Lincoln Field, Ill., Sept. 16.—I have a few words that I would like to say on the subject of training a fighter for a championship contest. I am going to get this off my chest in fairness to all concerned.

I have been bitterly criticized within the past few days. I have been called lots of names I did not deserve and some of my critics have gone so far as to say that I was about to lose out with Jack Dempsey.

I want to lay the cards on the table. With over four million persons in the city of Chicago, why should they pick on me?

What about the Tunney camp? How many times has Tunney worked in the past two weeks? I will venture to say that the newspaper men have seen at least six many workouts at Dempsey's camp as they have at Tunney's. Yet I do not hear of any one writing editorials about the awful Mr. Billy Gibson.

Why discriminate between us managers?

I have been trying my level best to help Dempsey get in condition for a winning fight. The crowds began to get on his nerves. I had to pay some attention to his wishes.

Not only that, it would have been positively insane to have allowed Dempsey to work hard under the weather conditions that have prevailed here during the past week. He would have left more in the gymnasium than he could possibly get out of it.

I am doing the best on the job I was hired to do, and I think everyone will agree after next Tuesday night that I have done it well. Dempsey is a pretty sweet bit of fighting machinery today. I think this will be the softest fight of his career.

I think he will regain his championship from Gene Tunney next week and I think he will use the trick by a knockout.

And I'm willing to continue running this camp to suit Dempsey's needs, no matter how hard I may get hit, if I get the results that I expect to get.

Joe Monte Fights Berger at Lynn

Joe Monte, the rugged Brockton light-heavyweight, and Gus Berger, "the German Oak," cash in the feature bout at the Crescent A. C. show at General Electric Field, Lynn, tonight.

In the semi-final, Danny Sears of East Boston will clash with Round House Johnny Wilson of New Bedford. Charley Ricardi of Worcester will meet Mike Sachos of Lawrence in one preliminary while in another Jimmy Valentine mingles with Johnny Rose, both of Boston.

EAGLES' FIRST TEAM WEAK

"That first string eleven looks rotten," was Head Coach Leo Daley's comment on the opening scrimmage of importance for the Eagle grid squad. Boston College's new mentor is a bit downhearted over the initial showing of his varsity eleven.

And he has all the reason in the world for being disappointed. Bill Kelleher's freshman club had all the better of the skirmish with the varsity at Alumni Field.

Leo believed that the regulars would have little trouble in chalking up three or four touchdowns against the yearlings. All the boys are in good condition and Lennan is the only one on the varsity who cannot be termed a veteran.

"There was no individual fault," continued Daley. "Everyone in the first looked rotten and team play was missing entirely. I thought the boys were a bit more advanced in the fundamentals and would be able to make a better showing. But now I see that the team is not progressed as far as I might have imagined."

But Leo has not thrown up his hands in despair. He is glad that he has learned the real ability of his team and found out the faults.

First and foremost is a large cut, which is due after today's practice. Daley will prune off almost two dozen candidates, bringing his squad down to 25 or 26.

Then will come long drills in signal practice. That is to say coming in and out of the huddle until they have some snap and precision. This was sadly lacking when the varsity lined up with the frosh.

Coach Daley has ordered a charging machine that should arrive at the Heights early next week. The machine is in for some punishment upon its arrival at Newton.

Poor tackling and the failure of the varsity to hit the freshman backs signifies that the tackling dummy will be in for a bit of fun as well as the charging machine.

MR. BOSTON
By Jack Conway

"JIM MALONEY will have at least one staunch supporter when he steps to bat against Tom Sayers, Detroit heavyweight sensation, in the feature ten-round bout at Tom Goodwin's 50-50 bargain card at the Arena on next Monday night," said Mr. Boston before he left for Chicago. "Joe Monte of Brockton," resumed the veteran, "is the young man who will have his nose close to the rosin while he roots for Shamus.

"Monte will have a personal reason for cheering for the South Boston boy. He wants to see Big Dan Carroll's dynamiter win so that he can later get a shot at his chin.

"I'd rather tackle Maloney than any heavyweight in the world," said Monte. 'Jimmy is a rough, tough fellow who is easy to hit. There fore I figure I could beat him. The only time I have trouble with an opponent is when he is clever. I always could handle the wide open punchers. I hope this Sayers doesn't beat me to it and tip Maloney over. They say Tom is a terrific clouter. If Sayers wins, I'll then be prepared to give him a tumble.'

"The aggressive Big. Monte will journey to Lynn tonight where he is billed to collide with Gus Berger, German heavyweight, in a ten-round bout at an open air show. Monte has won his last two starts by impressive knockouts and is of the opinion he will also be able to tip Berger over.

"JOE WOODMAN, manager of Sayers, apparently does not figure there is a heavyweight in the racket whom his sturdy knockout artist cannot handle.

"I have just wired Tom Goodman," writes Woodman, 'to get George Godfrey for Sayers after Tom knocks off Maloney. Sayers would rule a big, slow fellow like Godfrey.'

"One must admire Woodman for his confidence in view of the way Godfrey has been tripping along the pugilistic trail. Jack Sharkey is the only heavyweight who has been able to put a serious crimp in Godfrey's advance. The Boston contender outpointed Godfrey in this city a year ago.

"Godfrey's recent knockouts of Maloney and Mann will send his pugilistic stock soaring. A determined effort will be made to build him up as a new black menace. The fact that Sharkey has beaten Godfrey will always be a check upon the negro's championship advances.

"MALONEY says that in the event he is successful in getting by Sayers that he will be prepared to take on Godfrey in a return match in this city. Jimmy feels that it was a chance blow that upset him in the Philadelphia quarrel. Godfrey and Maloney would prove one of the best drawing cards that could be put on in this city.

"Tex Rickard didn't have an opportunity to witness Maloney do his stuff Monday night as I'll be out in the Chicago shooting gallery. Frank Meeoon, able financial editor, tells me that firearm stocks have gone up ten points during the past month. He says this is probably due to the heavy buying of shooting irons in Chicago.

"As you read this, I'll be in the battle arena. I didn't go to Chicago by the airplane route either. The Twentieth Century is still fast enough for an old-timer like me."

Extra! Extra! Round by Round Story of Fight

By FRANKLIN GRANT

Chicago, Sept. 15.—"Extry—Exxxtr-r-ry."

"Round by round description Dempsey-Tunney fight."

First Round

Dempsey led with a two-day lay-off and Tunney countered with a drive into the rough of Dempsey's whiskers. Tunney bluffed an aeroplane flight of 300 miles to cool off and Dempsey sipped some 4 o'clock tea. They fiddled and made a good job of it, even if there was no burning Rome to accompany them.

Dempsey scowled, crouched and rushed Tunney to the ropes, bestirred a fist into with his new Indian headdress. Tunney hit Dempsey's face with a volley of fire-spitting words and Dempsey staggered under the attack. He quickly recovered, landed with two afternoons of light training, but was shipped in the orgy of loafing by Tunney, who took three days off.

Dempsey drove a luncheon engagement at Tunney who responded with acceptance of an invitation to spend an evening at a house party. Dempsey climbed and mounted the house. Coming out of the break, Dempsey almost floored Tunney with a six syllable word which he had been practising in secret for nearly six weeks and the bell saved the champion.

ROUND TWO—Dempsey rushed out as Tunney hooked his first drive from the tee, bobbled his approach and three Tunneys, somewhat revived by the minute of rest, landed on Dempsey with two smashing nitrocaines from Aristole. Dempsey reeled as Tunney plunged in, and bit Tunney with some low English. Tunney protested to the referee but was overruled. Dempsey rushed to a race track for an afternoon with the ponies and Tunney countered with a fast trip to a boxing doll where he starred with three of the newest editions of poetry.

Dempsey tricked Tunney with some nocturnal training and Tunney countered by no training at all, thus tricking Dempsey into the belief that he did not need it at all—he was that good. They clinched. Tunney bit Dempsey on the break and Dempsey leaned in and crashed a right-handed bit of profanity at Tunney. The champion swooned as the bell rang.

Round Three—Tunney came out looking at his wrist watch. Dempsey drove for Tunney's chin, missed, they clinched and Tunney protested to the referee that the thing could not go on; that he had worked hard enough to earn his million and, anyway, he had an engagement for 10:30. The referee paid no heed.

Dempsey threw two hard looks at Tunney, landed with a cutting remark and again Tunney protested to the referee that he belonged to the fighters union and that he could not do any fighting as he was because he had an engagement, "It is important," he mixed at the official, as Dempsey landed a vicious swing but missed the ball completely because his stance was bad.

"Oh, if it's important that's different," said the referee. "Why didn't you say so in the first place. I gotta date, too, and if you ain't got one, Jack, you better find something to do because this fight is over and you both are evened."

The description may ignorance a few inaccuracies—but just a few—for this training session that Dempsey and Tunney are indulging in has ceased to be a serious thing and has become nothing but a hippodrome.

SHAUGHNESSY RETURNS TO HARVARD

Frank Shaughnessy, famous football and baseball coach, arrived in town with the Detroit Tigers this morning and went immediately to the Harvard Stadium to see how the Crimson grid candidates were progressing with the lateral pass.

Shaughnessy, it will be remembered, accepted an invitation from Coach Horween last Spring to show the Harvard players how to employ the lateral and he was anxious to find out how much they had learned about it during his three weeks of preparation.

During the baseball season Shaughnessy acts as a scout for the Tigers and as he will be in town for the next few days with the club he is expected to spend his spare moments with the Harvard squad polishing off the rough edges in their passing game.

The famous McGill rugby mentor refused to pass any opinion on Harvard's football chances. Neither would Coach Horween say anything about "dope" on the Crimson candidates are due to engage in a lot of lateral passing in the next few days.

The second day of practice at Soldiers Field opened with a blackboard talk by Horween on the field. This was followed by a signal drill of 30 minutes duration under the eagle eyes of eleven coaches.

The survivors of the first cut were divided into teams as follows:

Team A—Coombs and O'Connell, ends; Pratt and Clark, tackles; Shapiro and Parkinson, guards; Turner, center; Kelly, quarterback; Harper, rosby and Guarnaccia, backs.

Team B—Pickard and Lawrence, ends; Levin and Barrett, tackles; Stewart and Morrus, guards; Doeman, center; H. Burns, quarterback; S. Burns, Mason and Moses, backs.

Team C—Brown and Prior, ends; Leach and Peirsall, tackles; Tripp and Shaw, guards; Bell, center; Noble, quarterback; Jones, Donaghy and Holbrook, backs.

"TELESCOPES MAY COME A HANDY FORE SOME OF THE FANS IN CHICAGO"

JOHNSTON BATTLES LACOSTE

Tilden Meets Hunter for Right to Play in Finals of the National Singles

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 16 (A.P.).—French hopes of winning championship of the United States for the second time in two years rested today upon the shoulders of the stolid and steady Rene LaCoste, defending titleholder.

Although all four members of the victorious French Davis Cup team entered the tournament here Monday, LaCoste is the only one to reach the final round.

Warring American rackets seeking to regain as much as possible of their country's tennis glory swept Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon out of the tourney in the quarter-final yesterday, after Henri Cochet had shown them the way the day before.

A year ago three of the semi-finalists were French and one an American. This year three are American and only one is French.

Borotra, a finalist against LaCoste last year, went down yesterday before Tilden, 6—1, 3—6, 10—8, 6—1. The victory was sweet for "Big Bill" as it was in this same round in 1926 that Cochet defeated him and broke a six-year string of national title victories.

Two other members of the United States Davis Cup team make up the semi-final round.

Little "Bill" Johnston who scored a comeback against the French to win from Brugnon yesterday, is matched to meet LaCoste today, while "Big Bill" plays Francis T. Hunter, his Davis Cup doubles partner.

Hunter's quarter-final victory was gained at 4—6, 6—7, 6—0, 6—3, 6—4, over John Hennessey, conqueror of Cochet the day before. The Tilden vs. Hunter match was set for 2 30 o'clock this afternoon and the LaCoste Johnston battle was to start immediately afterward.

Only a remarkable upset can now avert a dramatic battle in the final between Tilden and LaCoste for the title. LaCoste defeated Tilden in the Davis Cup matches both this year and last and beat him once this season in matches abroad.

'Cav' Looks Like Another Fellow Minus Iron Hat

Cavanaugh's iron hat is no more! The famous derby which viewed many a football game at University Heights, Braves Field, and points along the Eagle's highway for the past few seasons has been displaced, now that the Major is located in New York, by a dark felt hat.

What has become of the "hard" it is difficult to say. It will be missed.

The Detroit Tigers will open a series with the Red Sox at the Fenway Park this afternoon. The Tigers are in a warm fight with Washington for third place.

NORWICH LEADER MAY NOT FACE DARTMOUTH

Northfield, Vt., Sept. 16.—Capt Roger Sherman, Norwich quarterback, may not play with the Cadets in their opening game of the season against Dartmouth a week from Saturday. He laid off practice for a week or 10 days in order that he may devote full time to his studies.

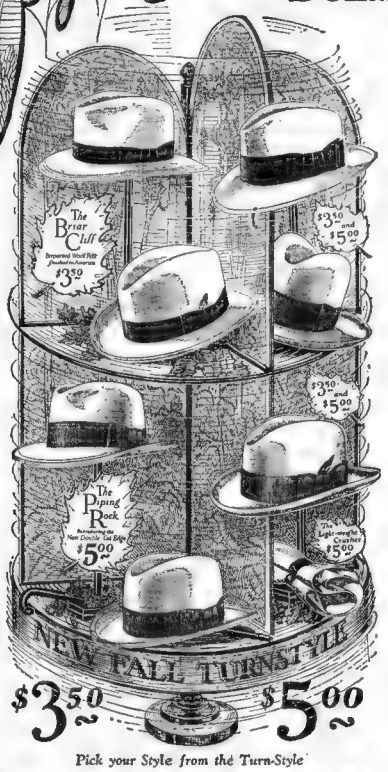
Sickness last June kept him missing all of his final examinations. He returned to college early in this month and has since been wrestling with physics.

Rickard's Kidding Not Confined to Broadway

Chicago, Sept. 16 (A.P.)—Like Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., in "Pinafore," Tex Rickard has his "sisters and his cousins and his aunts," and they all want to see the big fight next Thursday.

In the crush of other matters Rickard neglected to mail the promised complimentaries. So the relatives send Tom Rickard, a cousin, as a committee-of-one to get the tickets.

Dollars, Sense and Nonsense



AND, believe it or not, there's a lot of nonsense in a lot of hat ads I've seen this Season. I've looked over everything that's appeared in every city in U. S. A. where we have a store.

If any man read them all and believed everything he read, I don't know where he would go to buy a hat, if he wanted to GET THE MOST FOR HIS MONEY. And after all, that's what most of us want, whether we buy a hat or a house.

The Cheap Hatter talks "PRICE" because that's his strongest argument. Sometimes he charges as much as our low price. But he hasn't anything to compare with the QUALITY in our $3.50 Imported Wool Felt Hats.

The High Price Hatter talks "LABEL" and makes you think the principal reason why you should pay his "PRICE" is to show his name. Ask him to show you why you should pay more than $5.00 WITHOUT THE NAME.

Now PRICE doesn't mean anything unless you get a satisfactory QUALITY, and a "LABEL" on the inside doesn't improve the "QUALITY" or "STYLE" of the hat on the outside. If you could buy it without the label it would look just the same and cost less.

I tried it out this week. I know my $5.00 hat is as good or better than any $8.00 hat I pulled apart and examined. And I looked over everything from the Quality of the Felt in the body of the Hat to the Quality of the Silk in the Lining, Binding and Band.

Style and Color will speak for themselves, but if you look at the New Fall Turn-Style in my window today, you'll see every Style and Color shown elsewhere at higher prices, and a number of New Ones shown nowhere else, at Our prices.

JAMAICA TO PLAY AT QUINCY

Granite City Eleven to Entertain Long Island Outfit on October 15

By JOE CASHMAN

Several of our high schools are starting to take a page from the book of small colleges by arranging most ambitious football schedules.

Resignation of charter members of schoolboy leagues that desire to pick their own opponents are frequent and schools th never boasted membership in a circuit are tossing aside traditional rivals in favor of teams with bg reputations.

Take Quincy High as an example. This year, for the first time in its history, the Granite City eleven will oppose a team from outside the State. It will take on the Jamaics, L. I., Kids at Pfaffman Oval, Oct. 15. This means that Quincy will visit Jamaica next Fall.

The day may soon dawn when the majority of high schools will make at least one long trip each season.

Whether this practice would be beneficial to the sport or the participants therein is open to debate but in the case of Quincy it must be stated that the booking of the Jamaica contest has resulted in unprecedented interest in the sport.

50 CANDIDATES OUT.

More than 50 candidates answered Coach Franklin B. Mitchell's call, a much larger number than ever reported before.

Jamaica is touted as being a heavy, fast and experienced eleven. Last season it was beaten by but one point for the championship of the Borough of Queens, losing to Flushing High, 7 to 6, and the touchdown by Flushing was the first and only one made against Jamaica all season.

Coach Mitchell looks forward to a hard game and plans to have his team at the peak of its form for the contest. The mentor is blessed with a veteran forward line and is sure to have a strong defensive team. His major problem is to develop a backfield and it is to this end that he has been devoting his time and work.

Captain Neil Eaton, veteran tackle, will lead his team on the field for its first time a week from tomorrow at Quincy. Boston English will furnish the opposition.

Opening the season with the Hub eleven is another innovation at Quincy. For years, Newton has been the initial opponent of the South Shore team but, for reasons not stated, this contest was dropped this year.

OPENS WITH ENGLISH.

Quincy has one open date on its nine-game schedule. It is Oct. 8, one week before the Jamaica contest. Arlington was booked for this date but the authorities at the latter school recently discovered that they had a game with Watertown billed for the same day and requested Quincy to be excused. Coach Mitchell agreed but the mixup will probably result in the two schools severing athletic relations.

Flynn Canned Burke Dempsey Resented | Nearly Dropped Leo Tex Saved Day

By NICK FLATLEY

INSIDE STUFF IN DEMPSEY CAMP

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Here in the land of rumor and speculation and mystery and plot, it is very easy to find out that Jack Dempsey fights Gene Tunney next week. Chicago is one of the world's largest cities, but it goes for its sport very seriously.

There is no sign of the blase attitude affected in New York, where nothing is supposed to be big enough to cause more than a mere surface ripple on the stream of life. Out in this section the boys run wild looking for tickets, and stories. The big fight is tossed in the bag a hundred times an hour on each street corner.

Nick Flatley

A hundred different methods are discussed, and there's always somebody present who knew the bird that knew the guy, who heard the mob putting things in the satchel. Out of a mass of rumors, a little truth percolates now and then.

It develops that Leo P. Flynn and William Harrison Dempsey almost parted, that Tex Rickard, impressario de luxe, had to make a flying trip bearing along the well known dove of peace.

Martin Burke, the heavyweight, was the cause of the near explosion. Martin was Dempsey's sparring partner up at Saratoga. He is, incidentally, a great friend of Jack's. They have been pals for years. Dempsey naturally expected him to be in the camp when it opened.

Martin, however, was among the missing. The suspicious Mister Flynn had given him the air. Leo P. has been lingering around this fight racket so long that he doesn't trust anybody, including himself.

He knew that Burke was a great friend of Tunney's, and so he told Martin that he couldn't come to the camp. Leo figured that the friendship between the champion and Martin might overbalance the brotherly feeling between his own battler and the sparring partner.

Everybody between here and Timbuctoo knows that Mister Burke is not at all that kind of a young man, but Leo would take no chances, whatever. When all this was made known to Dempsey, he hopped into the air. He demanded Burke, or Leo's scalp. Bill Duffy, the man behind the Sharkey victory, was just about to be elected manager. Then Tex put in an appearance, and did his stuff.

Interesting enough, and would seem to indicate that the wonderfully contented mental state of Mister Dempsey, of which we have been reading so much lately, may be as much fiction as fact.

SCHOOLBOY NOTES

The schoolboy grid fan who has been sitting on the sidelines since last Thanksgiving craving for action, comes into his own again tomorrow when several first-class battles will be put on for his entertainment.

* * *

Opening day will find Worcester Commerce at Everett, Reading at Medford, Stoneham at Malden, Manchester at Lynn Classical, Natick at Swampscott, General Electric at Salem and St. Mary's of Waltham playing Dean Academy seconds at Franklin.

Coach Harry Tilton forwards the Trade School football schedule. The City League eleven will open its season against Middlesex at Concord a week from tomorrow. The rest of the list is as follows: Sept. 30, Watertown at Watertown; Oct. 5, Brighton at Braves Field; 12, Boston English at Fenway Park; 19, Commerce at Braves Field; 25, Dorchester at Braves Field; Nov. 4, Latin at Fenway Park; 15, South Boston at Braves Field; 12, Mechanic Arts at Fenway Park.

"Nate" Coleman, former Holy Cross tackle, has been named football coach at St. Mary's High, Waltham, succeeding Frankie Smith, ex-Dartmouth star, who resigned to be come coach of Waltham Junior High.

Coach Arthur G. Hilbert has a squad of 43 scrimmaging at Franklin High. The eleven, of which Farrington, a veteran guard is captain, should be in fine shape for the opening game on Oct. 1.

* * *

Manager Raphael Costello sent the Franklin high schedule, which is as follows: Oct. 1, Milford; 8, Canton; 15, open; 22, Foxboro at Foxboro; 29, Medway; Nov. 5, Ashland at Ashland; 12, Hopkington, 19, Walpole at Walpole.

INDRISANO HAS HIS BIG SHOT

Not since the memorable night Johnny Wilson took the measure of Mike O'Dowd, annexing the world's middleweight championship, has a local fighter faced an astounding an opportunity of upsetting another titleholder as Johnny Indrisano, East Boston boy, when he meets Joe Dundee, welterweight king, in the next open air show of the Argonne A. A. at Braves Field, Thursday evening, September 22.

There is no doubt that Indrisano is on his way to the title. And for this reason he has aroused boxing interest in East Boston after it has remained dormant for more than 10 years.

John Scaramello, president of the Coleman Club of the Noddle Island district, already has arranged for a load of 20 pieces and it is expected that the club members will have no less than 2,000 fans in the line of march from East Boston to Braves Field.

Although born in the North End, Indrisano is now living on Butler Avenue, East Boston, and his popularity in that section knows no bounds.

Indrisano, an all-around athlete as well as a fighter of note, has made hundreds of friends on the athletic field. The East Boston boy is probably the best golfer in the fistic profession today.

Yost Quits as Michigan Coach

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 15.—Fielding H. (Hurry-up) Yost, football coach at Michigan since 1901, announced at the initial meeting of the Wolverine candidates that the 1927 coaching assignment has passed into other hands. His duties as director of athletics at Michigan will call for more activities than ever before and will render it impossible for him to handle the football team, Yost explained.

Tad Wieman, Yost's former assistant, will be at the head of the 1927 coaching staff. Assisting him will be Harry Kipke, Jack Blott, George Veenker and R. O. Courtright.

Inside Golf

By Chester Horton

If you have tried working the club-head forward from the "top of the right leg position" you must have noticed how much like cracking a whip the action is. Also, with the wrists held "cocked" just a trifle as you start the forward swing, that graceful, rhythmic sweep through the ball is attained. You have but one thing more to add and that is, hit down into the ball and hit straight out into the line a few inches. Do not overdo this, however. Swinging this way, too, you will perhaps catch the real meaning of the term "pressing." You will note that very little pressure against the shaft is required. You largely just let it swing. It is desirable to avoid pushing against the shaft, in efforts to further speed it up, because doing so will cause your wrists to stiffen, also the forearm muscles. When these muscles stiffen the clubhead will lack a rhythmic smoothness through the ball, and timing will likely be a bit late—just enough to slice you a little. Keep free and easy.

BABE RUTH IS ACQUITTED

New York, Sept. 16 A P.)—A charge of assault brought against Babe Ruth, slugging Yankee outfielder, by a man who asserted Ruth had attacked him on Broadway, was dismissed today.

A crowd of Ruth's admirers greeted the dismissal with cheers. A hundred hands reached for the bulky frame of Ruth, lifted him to shoulders and carried him triumphantly from West Side Court.

The charge against Ruth was brought by Bernard Niemeyer, an interior decorator, who accused the Babe of hitting him "a terrible blow in the eye."

NATIONAL WOMEN'S GOLF STARTS NEXT MONDAY

New York, Sept. 16.—Feminine golf stars to the number of 148, representing all parts of the United States, and including the champion of Britain and France—Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaume—are paired for the qualifying round of the national women's golf championship at the Cherry Valley Club, Garden City, N. Y., next Monday.

Mack Charges "Razzer" Upset Morale of Team

Philadelphia, Sept. 16 (A.P.).—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, today sought legally to restrain a fan, whose alleged "razzing" and taunts from the stands, he said, broke up the morale of the team and resulted in one valuable player being traded away.

The fan, Harry Donnelly, twenty-six, was arrested while the Chicago White Sox-Athletics game was in progress yesterday by park police men at the request of Mr. Mack, was held in $500 bail.

"There are several persons," Mr Mack said at the hearing, "who come out to the park just to 'ride' the players and the umpires and get their 'goat.' One day last week Umpires Hildebrand and Rowland stopped the game for ten minutes and refused to go on until the fans stopped their chiding."

The manager referred to Wednesday in particular when he said that Donnelly "rode" Sammy Hale, third baseman, until he had him so nervous he would have missed the ball had one been hit to him.

The player Mack referred to that had to be traded is Bill Lamar.

"Lamar was one of the finest outfielders I ever had," he said, "but a group of fans of which Donnelly seems to be the leader, kept 'razzing' him until he wasn't any good to me and I had to trade him."

Donnelly denied Mack's charges and said he was rooting for the team as he wanted it to win.

Cote Is Recalled By N. Y. Giants

New York, Sept. 16 (I.N.S.).—The New York Giants have purchased Pitchers Jesse Doyle and Leo Mangum from Toronto and Jim Chagnin, Jersey City hurler, who recently shut out the Yankees.

Andy Cohen, Buffalo infielder, Warren Cote, Toledo infielder; Pitcher Henry Boney of Newark and Pitcher Ned Porter of St. Augustine, have been recalled. Blackie Carter, infielder sent to Buffalo on option early in the season, has been sold to Toledo.

BARBECUE BY WEYMOUTH K. C.

Members of Weymouth Council No. 759 K. of C. are busy completing plans for their annual barbecue to be held tomorrow at the Weymouth Fair Grounds.

The affair has been one of the features of the out-door season for the past two years. The local Knights have gained the reputation of having a wonderful time at their annual funfest, the committee in charge are working hard to make the event this year even greater than the past two seasons.

The Philadelphia Colored Giants each year featured as the major attraction of the sport program will be on hand again with the Fore River Club of Quincy as their opponents.

Last year nearly 8,000 people wrecked the Giants and Boston Colleges, and an even greater throng is expected this year. Arrangements are already being made to handle the crowd around the ball field so that everyone will have a clear view of the game.

Gagnon Meets Correy

JACK DEMPSEY Tells of Comeback

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CHICAGO, Sept 16.—Gene Tunney says that he must step out and win this next fight from me just to prove that he is—and always was—the better man, and thus silence forever the talk that our last meeting was "one of those things."

I say that I am going into that battle resolved to win, or be crushed to the floor in failure, caring not what people say AFTER I have won.

Ever since Tunney and I fought it out in Philadelphia, and I put up so miserable a showing, some folks have said that I could not have fought so poorly, or been beaten so decisively, if I had really been trying. So they have whispered to their neighbors that it was all arranged for Tunney to win the title and have a little fun with it for a year, after which I was to take it back.

Every fact that has to do with that fight PROVES that it was on the level.

If I went in there deliberately to lose, I certainly could have lost more artistically than I did. If I went out there without a chance for victory, because of this alleged frame-up, does any man think I would have kept wading into Tunney and let him hammer my face out of shape and batter it so that I was hardly recognizable for a month.

I'M not much of an actor. But if I were only acting as a fighter in that battle, I certainly could have done ten thousand times a better job than I did. Surely, if I were faking, I would have been less crude than I showed in that fight. If I had gone in there to lose, I would not have put up so terrible an exhibition.

If I had faked in that fight, and lost it deliberately, so that I could get it back this year, does anyone think I would have taken the chance against Sharkey in July. A tough fellow, the Sharkey. Not only did he have an even chance to beat me, but the gambling crowd made him a favorite in the battle.

Sharkey might have won from me. I'll admit he had me in a bad way in that first round. If he hadn't got a bit excited in the second, and thrown too many wild punches, or if my jaw had been a bit frailer than it is, he might have sent me for a buggy ride along in the second or third. But he didn't. And I won.

But it was a close squeak.

DOESN'T the fact that I risked my chance of getting another crack at Tunney by fighting the dangerous Sharkey prove that I lost to Tunney last year on merit; that there was no frameup? If that doesn't prove it, what else can?

In one of my earlier articles I pointed out the absurdity of the story that I deliberately lost to Tunney by shoving along facts and figures. Possession of the title after that fight meant $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 to me. If I were going to "sell out" who would pay me? The only person who would benefit by my losing to Tunney would have been Tunney himself.

THE most money that any single gambler has been credited with winning on that fight is around $200,000 or $250,000. And the most that any group won was around $600,000.

Can any sane, reasoning man, show me how a group of gamblers that won no more than $600,000 would pay me $1,000,000 to tip them off that I would lose just to please them?

According to estimates made, Tunney will get from $1,000,000 to $700,000 more out of this fight on the 22nd than I will. His share, if the house is sold out will be well over $1,100,000. Mine won't touch a half million.

What man, in his right senses, will cling to the idea that I deliberately lost to Tunney last year so that he could make from $700,000 to $700,000 more out of this year's fight than I will?

LIKE Tunney I've heard it said that if I win this next fight there'll be a few thousand persons who will step right up and say:

"I told you so. The boys reached an agreement. Dempsey agreed to lose last year. Let Gene have the title for a year, and then Dempsey will take it back."

Well, they can prepare to step up and say anything they want. I wasn't right for that fight last year, and, on top of that, Tunney proved to be better than I thought he was. And he outsmarted me. But he will never do it again.

I'm going out to flatten him. And I will flatten him.

INTER-STATE GOLF MATCH TOMORROW

By BILL GRIMES

In the Massachusetts-Rhode Island Inter-State match, which will be played tomorrow at the Wannamoisett Country Club, just outside of Providence, the Bay State team will be without the services of Eddie Lowery, the State champion, Fred Wright, the New England amateur titleholder, Francis Quimet and Jesse Guilford, the local aces, and Billy Whitcomb of Worcester, who was a finalist in both the Massachusetts and New England championships.

Although the five leading players of the State will not be on hand, Massachusetts is sending a strong aggregation to battle the Little Rhody outfit.

Billy McPhail, Ray Gorton and Joe Batchelder are the only players selected who saw action against Rhode Island at the Charles River Country Club last season.

McPhail and Gorton were paired in the four ball event last year and defeated Al Sisson and Marshall McDonald and the Norfolk player came through with another victory in the singles matches against Dan Fairchild. Gorton did not play in the singles while Batchelder won by default.

GENE TUNNEY World's Heavyweight Champion

(Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Lake Villa, Ill., Sept. 16.—I have experienced the hardest day since I won the title from Jack Dempsey at Philadelphia.

First, there was the heat which was enough to wilt any young athlete training for a championship fight and then with the thunderstorm which broke, came fifty newspaper correspondents from all over the country.

It was the first time the boys had descended in a mass attack on me, and for three hours they plied me with more questions than it was possible for any one human to answer.

A few of my opinions, however, which may escape print, should be of interest to readers of this story.

I told the boys—and this is nothing new—that I am and always have been fundamentally against the publication of the amounts of prize fight purses. No big man fights with another victory in the offing unless the sum a champion gets from a bout should be made public any more than annual receipts of the Standard Oil Company.

A GOOD deal has been written to the effect that if Dempsey won back the title it would lower the boxing game. I can't figure this. I believe that the best thing that ever happened to any division of the game is for it time to change hands every so often.

I will show that following [illegible] at Philadelphia in which I [illegible] his title, the heavyweight game was given a [illegible] lift.

[illegible] the crowds drawn at [illegible] fights during the past Winter by the heavyweights, not to mention also the numerous small fights throughout the country.

Personally I believe boxing is [illegible] to enjoy more popularity than it ever has before. The war renewed interest in it and the reaction by constantly pointing to those who will put the game on a lower plane. [illegible] work out. I boxed three rounds each with Ruby Vidabeck and Chuck Wiggins, and the boys found me easy to look at. I plan to rest today and [illegible] work out Saturday if this [illegible] After the [illegible] there was my [illegible] storm breaks the best wave.

WHEN our Style Committee presented for my approval the new line for Fall, they told me the history and reason for every new Style introduced.

The Sales Manager said this shoe was a duplicate of So-And-So's, and that one was a reproduction of another high-grade manufacturer's popular model, etc., etc.

When I asked for the original shoe that they copied, and put them side-by-side, I couldn't tell which was which, without looking at the labels.

Our factory Manager showed me one shoe that he had cut apart to find out how, and what it was made of. And our Upper and Sole Leather Buyer convinced me the material in the duplicate was exactly the same or just as good as the original.

The actual evidence "SOLD" me, and I thought it was the simplest and strongest way to convince you of the real Value we put in a Regal Shoe.

I suggested that we put one of the original $13.50 shoes in the window with a Regal duplicate for $6.60 right beside it, and give you the specifications and ask you to compare the shoes.

Now this is just what we've done. We've purchased and duplicated a number of the most popular styles for Street, Dress and Sport that are made by High-Price Manufacturers and sold by High-Price Retailers. AND THEY'RE IN OUR STORES TODAY.

Making the School Lunch Attractive

By MARTHA LEE

"UNCH" boxes and lunches are always a source of mortification to the sensitive child. Ugly boxes and large slabs of unattractive looking sandwiches, however, need no longer cause him unhappiness.

A look through the department stores will discover dozens of dainty and attractive boxes with all kinds of heart warming equipment—small knives and forks, special glass compartments for a salad or a custard, small vacuum bottles for carrying milk or hot chocolate.

The sandwich itself is no longer the thing of mere utility that it used to be. No lunch box should lack variety in these days of the glorified sandwich. Here are a few menus:

Menu No. 1—Cornet beef (canned if you like) chopped and mixed with a mild prepared mustard, placed between thinly buttered slices of graham bread, cut into triangles, separately wrapped, is hard to improve on. In a container, the lettuce hearts may be carried with another tiny container of salad dressing or the delicious Russian or Thousand Island dressing that so many people prefer and that comes already prepared. Crisp cheese crackers and a shining red apple complete this nourishing lunch.

Menu No. 2—A slice of tender pink roasted ham is placed on a buttered slice of graham or whole wheat bread, covered with a thinly sliced layer of sweet pickles and another buttered slice of bread. Crusts are cut off and the sandwiches cut in squares or triangles for easy eating. Graham crackers spread with raspberry or strawberry jam make an acceptable dessert followed by an orange and a five-cent box of raisins. Entire wheat bread with raisin and nut filling make a delicious sandwich as does the always popular bi-weekly raisin bread spread with sweet butter or jelly.

Menu No. 3—The deviled eggs in this lunch may require a little special attention. Firstly, eggs for stuffing should be boiled gently for twenty minutes, then plunged immediately in cold water until cool. This prevents the yolks from turning dark and makes the shells easier to remove. Mash the yolks and add half the amount of deviled ham and enough melted butter or salad dressing to make easy to spread, refill the whites, press closely together, sprinkle the outside layer with pepper and salt and roll up in wax paper. A small container of cole slaw, a few finger snaps and a ripe banana complete this menu.

Menu No. 4—Deviled ham and celery sandwiches is an unusually delicious combination and are made by mixing together one-half cup finely chopped celery, one-quarter cup finely chopped green pepper, one small can of superior quality deviled ham with enough salad dressing to spread easily. Deviled ham and chopped hard boiled eggs mixed with mayonnaise are another excellent sandwich filling, not to mention the delicious deviled ham and tomato sandwiches made by spreading one slice of bread with deviled ham, the other lightly with mayonnaise and a thin layer of tomato slices, then pressing the two together. Deviled ham, chicken and mayonnaise is equally popular between fresh white bread.

Menu No. 5—It is difficult to find anything better than the combination of cream cheese, guava jelly and buttered nut bread. Cheese and guava jelly are extremely nourishing, easily digestible and well adapted to school lunches. A few sticks of crisp celery in an air-tight container, a cup custard and an apple will balance the lunch.

Menu No. 6—A bacon sandwich forms the piece de resistance of this lunch. The bacon is fried golden brown with every particle of fat absorbed. Graham or whole wheat bread is lightly buttered and spread with a thick layer of tart sauce. Then slices of bacon are laid on with a graham bread covering and cut in finger length pieces. A jar of creamy milk and two graham crackers and maple sugar sandwiches complete this meal. These sandwiches are easily made by placing marshmallows between graham crackers and setting in the oven just long enough to melt the marshmallows.

Since it's always easier to prepare lunches quickly when you can fall back on a well-stocked pantry shelf, I'd advise you to dedicate a little corner to school lunches and to keep on it a jar of delicate prepared mustard, a box or two of assorted crackers and cookies, a generous supply of seedless raisins, a can or two of deviled ham, canned or boxed fish, a tin box of marshmallows, a jar or box of bacon, and on the sideboard, an unfailing supply of fresh fruit.

With such a variety to choose from and with a supply of dainty wrapping paper and containers you may be very sure that the contents of your child's lunch box will never be surreptitiously thrown into the bushes.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEEKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEEKMAN:

I am about to be married and would like to know who furnishes the flowers for the bride and her bridesmaids. I have always known the groom to do that—am I correct?

UNCERTAINTY.

THE groom always sends the bridal bouquets to his bride, and sometimes to her attendants. However since it is most important that in the costumes of the attendants and in the decorations there be artistic harmony, usually the family of the bride and the bride have definite plans about the kind of flowers and especially about the colors of the flowers that they wish to have the attendants carry. That is why it is customary for the parents of the bride to give the flowers to the attendants. However, the groom may do it if he decides with the bride on just what types she wishes the bouquets to be.

Cream your Coffee—hot or iced—this way

Coffee can't be truly delicious unless it's richly creamed . . . Now, don't begin to talk about expense! Bottled cream does cost a lot—but there's another way—a mighty economical way—to get creamy richness into your steaming morning cup, or into your tall, frosty glass of iced coffee at dinner time.

Coffee hot or coffee cold—cream it and sugar it with Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk! It isn't just plain "canned milk"—but from it is a delicious blend of pure, fresh, full-cream country milk and finest sugar. Creamy rich! More than twice as rich as ordinary milk, because most of the water has been taken out. Bottled milk, you know, is 87% water.

Standard Milk will give you true cream-and-sugar deliciousness at one-half the cost of separate cream and sugar! Use it!

This way for Hot Coffees

Put one or two teaspoonfuls of Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk into the empty coffee cup. Then pour in the hot coffee. Note the rich, heavy body—the perfect golden color—the mellow flavor! Your coffee will be creamed and sugared to perfection!

And this way for Iced Coffees

Make the coffee by your favorite method, using 4x heaping tablespoonfuls of coffee to two pints of water. Strain the coffee and add three-fourths cup of Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk. Chill and serve.

Get this extra goodness into your cooking, too! Use Standard Sweetened Condensed Milk in any recipe that calls for both milk and sugar. Get it from your grocer today! Remember—it stays fresh for days after the can is opened, even without ice!

Edison turned from his early experiments with carbon. It seemed an unsatisfactory substance, but he never lost faith in it. He tried platinum in the lamp shown here, which was made in 1878 and patented April, 1879. This was the first incandescent lamp patent obtained by Edison.

During the month that Edison applied for his first lamp patent a group of capitalists met the inventor and planned an electric light company. These moneyed men had the vision to see that revolutionary changes were about to take place in the field of lighting.

Realizing that Edison was one of the most interesting "subjects" of the day, the newspapers and magazines kept him almost constantly in the public eye. A copy of Leslie's Weekly of 1880 contained the above picture of Edison experimenting with carbonized paper for his lamps.

Switching from platinum back to carbon, Edison hit on the idea of carbonizing cotton thread for a filament. After many exhausting hours with his co-worker, Charles Batchelor, he produced a practical incandescent electric lamp, October 21, 1879. (Continued tomorrow)

Fashions and Fads

A Lingerie Surprise is afforded by the pearl gray undergarments that have recently been imported from Paris. In georgette, satin or a combination of the two, this lingerie is doubtlessly intended to be worn under the gray frocks that are being favored for Fall by French style authorities. Although practically every pale, soft shade has been seen in dainty underwear, gray has never before been featured.

Chic Chiffon Squares in strikingly colored printed designs are being worn with one corner wound around the throat, allowing the rest to cascade down one side in a graceful drape effect.

Dr. Reed on Prevention of Headaches in Active People

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

ARE you the victim of headaches? Am I such a person in active life? The two are often combined. When this occurs proceeding on the natural law of cause and effect, you, possibly, will most properly have gone the rounds of doctors to find the source of your affliction. You may have been successful and found corresponding relief. Or you may have failed, the final verdict having been "idiosyncrasy." That, according to the dictionaries, means a "constitutional peculiarity." But the doctor really means by that high sounding word most learnedly to say: "I don't know a darn thing about the cause and can't find out."

The distinguished British authority, Lord Dawson, (British Medical Journal) has taken a turn at explaining. He says that headache is not a brainache. The brain substance proper is not sensitive—has no feeling in it. It is a membrane called the dura mater, which covers the brain and is very sensitive to stretching. It is stretched if the pressure in the blood vessels of the brain becomes unduly high, a state of affairs that may be produced by many causes.

Liability to headache is a feature in every individuality, and an indicator of the patient's reaction to environment. The same causes will produce headache in one person, slight headache in another and in a third no headache at all. The man or woman who is constitutionally nervous and highly-strung and leads a responsible anxious life, especially if he or she also suffers from eyestrain or digestive faults, is a predestined sufferer from migraine.

The headaches of active life either accord with the classical descriptions of migraine or occur with disorders of the digestive system, with physical or mental exhaustion, or with psychological disorder like the anxiety state. They are closely related in many ways but vary very much in form.

Take, for instance, the disciplined man with a highly strung nervous system who has had a heavy week's work and perhaps is proud of having stood it so well. On Sunday he plays a round of golf and finishes as fit as when he started. "Good," he says, "I am as young as ever I was," so he then plays a second round and has a square meal. He then goes down with a fearful attack of migraine.

The best preventive of these exhaustion headaches in active people is the exercise of just a little common sense.

Flattery Not a Winner of True Friends

By LUCY LOWELL

SHE'S been with us again—the flatterer. Every one calls her that. Some a bit wonderingly, others with more than a little contempt.

For she works so hard at the silly art of blandishment. So much too hard, dripping soft words and softer glances, never missing a chance to say the honeyed thing. And even in the first half hour of her acquaintance you ask yourself, "Can she mean all that? And, if she does, what does it do, anyway?

"Has she no dislikes, preferences, differences of opinion, certain little hardnesses that are rocks of character? Why should she be so overly pleased with everything?

"And if she doesn't mean it," your thoughts go on. "Why, then, it isn't the woman herself you see before you, but a mask she has made up to wear. And there must be something disagreeable she wishes to hide if she wears a mask!"

And as time goes along and you get to know her better, you rather swing round to the opinion that she doesn't mean it. And then you feel somewhat resentful, for, after all, nobody likes to meet a mask. And then all her soft varieta fall flat and all her blandishments are as empty air.

What we admire in others more, perhaps, than any quality is sincerity. Even if it isn't always quite agreeable we like it because it is open and aboveboard, and we never can take away from it the uncomfortable sense of having been defrauded.

"Let those flatter who fear," said Thomas Jefferson. "It is not an American art. To give praise where it is not due might be well from the venal, but would ill beseem those who are asserting the rights of human nature. They know and will, therefore, say that kings are the servants, not the proprietors, of the people."

No, flattery is not an American art, nor does it accord with the fine, frank spirit of Americans.

ON "KEEPING THE BALANCE"

MAN, the great THINKER,
Thinks he stands on
The TOP of the WORLD.
For man, for GENERATIONS,
Has believed that IF
There was ANY BALANCE
At all on this EARTH—
He had it.
SOME go so far
As to say that ALL the BALANCE that exists in
The world WAS brought About by MEN. They CONCEIVED it and
Brought it FORTH
OCCASIONALLY one does

See a man showing
The world something,
Like LINDBERGH,
Or maybe like
LINDBERGH. Or
TEACHING the world
But these are RARE.
Something like GHANDI.
Even so, MEN have more
STABILITY than women.
And goodness knows they NEED it. For HISTORY has proved that
All it takes to

One—intriguing WOMAN.

A Story of Sylvia Byrant, Stenographer, Among the Money Crowd

Joyce Ackerman, wife of Vance Ackerman, rich broker, appeals to Alexander Ladd, a lawyer, to help her in her battle with Margot Liggett, who has won her husband's affections. Ladd persuades Mrs. Ackerman to install Sylvia Bryant, his stenographer, in her home as social secretary. Stuart Gifford falls in love with her. Sylvia overhears Margot's divorced husband threaten to kill Ackerman. To avert a tragedy Sylvia begs Ackerman to take her to dinner.

Afterward Ackerman is stabbed to death. Ladd tells Sylvia she is in a dangerous position and he will devote himself to the task of getting her out of it. He gives her back her old job in his office with increased pay. Ladd corners Jack Liggett and gives him a chance to escape in return for a confession of guilt. Liggett flees and Sylvia is cleared of suspicion. She leaves Ladd's office. Gifford insists that she marry him.

CHAPTER 46

AT last it had come—like something forced against the will—Stuart Gifford's proposal of marriage. They were sitting in the grill room of a hotel after the theatre. The music of a deluxe orchestra was in their ears, a heart-stimulating sweetness of sound; they had been dancing and the memory of bodies close together was with them both. Across the table he had asked Sylvia to be his wife.

"You're the only thing that counts with me, Sylvia," he said. "I thought some other things in life were important but they aren't. They're not worth waiting for. We only live once—and I want you now."

The proposal meant more to him than to her because it involved a final fling for a high stake on his part—with Sylvia it was on a par, almost, with all of his other love-making.

"Would you still want to marry me if I didn't love you, Stuart?"

"I'll make you love me!" he declared fervently. "We're just wasting time going on like this. I mean it, Sylvia—I'm on the square. You've worked long enough; you can take it easy from now on."

"That doesn't tempt me much—the part about taking it easy," she said. "I wouldn't marry for an easy living. I would have to be sure it was love."

He stormed at her. "You don't know what you want! There isn't anyone else—"

"No, not even poor little Jimmie Devlin any more. It looks like you —or nobody, Stuart."

"Then why in God's name can't we settle all that? You love me—you know you do—but you just can't realize it, that's all. You keep stalling and stalling—"

"I'm trying to help it—"

"You've got to give me an answer," he insisted. "It's not fair for you to keep me dangling like this, between Heaven and earth!"

"I know it," Sylvia said, miserably. "Would you be willing to wait?"

"Wait! What else have I been doing? Do you want me to go on waiting forever?"

She felt her resistance being battered down. She had grown to know him so well, was so familiar with him, that he seemed near to her life—I'm on the square. You've—like one of the family.

His Impatience Was Swallowed Up in His Eagerness

"Give me a little more time, Stuart," she said, earnestly. "A month. Sometimes I think there would be nothing so nice on earth as to be your wife—and then again, I am not sure. But I'll promise this—we'll let things stand just as they are and if in a month—if things are still live as best, amounted to something much larger. I'll marry you. But I don't want you to rush me. Let's not talk about it any more . . . till then. We'll be just friends . . ."

His impatience was swallowed up in his eagerness, his anticipation. It was as good as settled; he could contemplate the delay without undue basis, with a kind of whetted delight.

Sylvia's mood, prolonged through days, was a resignation, a state of surrender to the inevitable fate of matrimony. For a little while longer she would be able to keep herself aloof, but she was acutely conscious of the encroachment of time toward the ultimate goal. No girl, she imagined, could want a more suitable mate than Stuart Gifford. His charm was subtle and penetrating; she had grown so accustomed to him, to his looks, his voice, that she was beginning in his absence to miss him keenly. But this was not often for he was with her at all possible times.

But her girlish hope of happiness had been so high, so exalted that she was puzzled at the emotion which, at best, amounted to no more than agreeable contentment. What was it, she wondered, that she was missing? Probably nothing, the rest, the moonlight and stardust, might have existed only in the foolish imagination of her youth.

It seemed to Sylvia that her head, her common sense, had conquered. Gifford was, or would be, rich; she would have every comfort and most of the luxuries. She admired him for his final willingness to risk disinheritance. Money was important and Gifford had enough—to Sylvia it was wealth—even without what he expected from his uncle. No grounds for unhappiness existed, civilized existence that would always be filled with a great deal of fine feeling and limitless security for both.

Externally, the Impending Union Seemed to Sober Gifford

Externally, the impending union seemed to sober Gifford. It would be better, he told her, for them to keep it largely a secret. For family reasons, for a time. Of course, her people should know, but there was no necessity of discussing it with them beforehand. To this Sylvia had no objection. She wanted to please him in all things possible.

In the meantime they found a great deal of enjoyment together. Gifford, committed to marriage, became almost as willing as Sylvia to wait dispassionately. But there was always in his eyes a gleam, a light, that was reflected in hers.

No practical plans as to their domestic life were discussed; it was understood that they would, first, go to Europe. Never, quite, did Sylvia regard any of it as certain.

Once when she happened to think about Alexander Ladd she asked Stuart if he ever saw him any more. Ladd, he replied, seemed to have dropped out of existence. A good riddance.

By accident Sylvia—she was still working for the export firm—met the little blonde stenographer from Ladd's firm at luncheon in a restaurant. That time Sylvia's inquiry was answered.

"Mr. Ladd, oh, he ain't with the firm any more. No, he never came back. They couldn't patch up their differences. Say, was he ever kinda sweet on you, Sylvia?"

If he had been, Sylvia said, he had never shown it.

"Well, they say it's a shame the way he's going to the dogs—ever since then. And that row about the way he acted in the Ackerman case. Somebody from the office saw him. I don't know who it was, but they said he was certainly on the loose.'

Suddenly, Sylvia knew that, at any cost, she must see Alexander Ladd.

"I can't want to hurt your feelings, Sylvia," the blonde continued, "but it has been said around the office that you were the one that put him on the fritz. They said he started to have bad luck from the day he met you."

Sylvia decided to see him immediately, if he could be found.

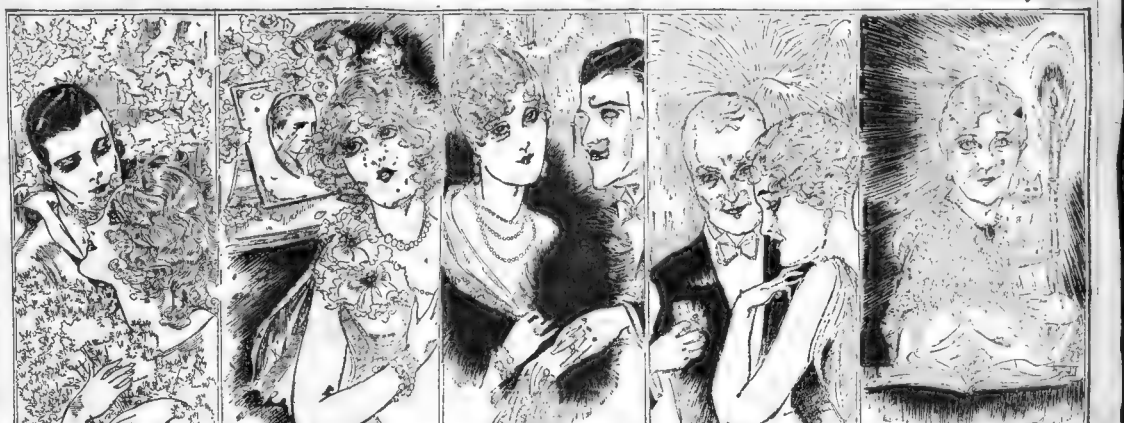
The Girl Who Never Married---and Why

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack



WHAT greater tragedy does the world know than the gray-haired woman who is absolutely all alone? Who can guess but feebly at her thoughts as she wistfully watches the happy faces about her.

Each day is peopled with the unhappy ghosts of yesterday, and the regrets which crowd her back into herself and her own thoughts, and envelop her in an aura of loneliness and unhappiness, which no one is privileged to pierce.

And why? When she was very young, very lovely, poised on the brink of the great adventure we call "Life," she fell in love, but she was too young to marry. A little later she fell in love again, but this time he was too poor and her selfish pride demanded a man who could give her everything she wanted. Then in the prime of her loveliness came a man, wealthy, adoring, but—she couldn't marry him because she didn't find love in her heart for him.

When the rosy days of romance were gone there came one seeking her for her charm and graciousness, but she refused his advances, because she still yearned for the love which had been denied her. Therefore, in the Autumn days of her life, she's all alone.

'Becky'; Heroine Tells Abelard About Her Hopes and Ambitions

know, Miss Independence, this Abelard who's throwing the studio mash is Estabrook's buddy. Now what do you think about going?"

Becky leaned against the wall, her hands clenched behind her. "I'm scared Dan," she whispered. "They say these parties are something terrible. Terrible rough, see?"

"Abelard's a gentleman."

Becky sneered. "That means a lot."

Scarlett flung up his hands despairingly. "God, do you want to go or not? Do you want to meet this Abelard or not?"

"I do . . ." Oh, I do, Dan, but . . ."

"You heard the old saying about opportunity knocking just once?"

"Good girl," he whispered triumphantly. Then a bell rang and Becky was off like a shot, taking her place on the stage.

Now it is a fact that even while Becky wriggled in the chorus of the popular Revue, it was written in the pattern books of the fates, or Norns, as some call them, that Becky was to meet John Carroll Estabrook of the Massachusetts Estabrooks. It was written that Becky was to meet him, and greet him as a stranger, although she had once looked upon his face across the counter of a store. It happened several months after the night Becky learned from Scarlett that her idol was a friend of Abelard.

These months we can pass over in a few minutes. Yet—because in Abelard Becky found a sincere admirer and a loyal friend—we must pause for an instant on that August night, before passing on to the drama which followed.

Becky found herself almost magically in a fine Back Bay apartment.

Gloria, white faced and crimson lipped, circulated escort by men in evening clothes.

In the dancing, gaily tinted frocks, trimmed with silver and gold, cascading fringe and scintillating rhinestones, caught and returned, and handled the light back and forth. Bright mouths and brilliant dark rimmed eyes flashed messages. Bare throats and darkly uncovered backs sparkled with diamonds, drooped with the weight of pearls. Slim, red nailed hands, lightly resting on broadcloth shoulders, or caressing eager faces, were alive with colored stones, gems of every quality, false and real.

In the centre of the room was a large marble bowl. In the marble bowl Violet Vincent splashed and floundered, soaking her extravagant costume in the water, and repeating joyously, "It's the first time I been cool inna week!"

Other ladies followed suit; there was a surge of people toward the fountain; gales of laughter rippled in the still air as dripping figures emerged and were taken again into the whirl of the dance.

"What're you beating it for? Afraid you'll spoil that wonderful creation?" Somebody pulled the arm of a slim girl, duskily attired in a shapeless green thing, unadorned by jewels. "Nothing like a swim for your health. In you go."

"Lemme alone—I got a cold now. Ouch! Let go!"

"Wonder of wonders. Put in a nickel and see the lady that's cold in August." More protests. A loud splash. There she goes. Nice doggie, playing dead." The figure in the fountain was limp. "Hey—what's the matter? Come out."

A man pushed his way through the crowd about the marble basin—Boris Abelard himself—tall, thin as a skeleton, dark hair accentuating the white of his face. An ugly man, with a monacle screwed into his left eye. A very ugly man, but distinguished withal.

"You stupid fools," he cried out sharply. "Can't you enjoy yourselves ever — without hurting someone? The g-g girl has fainted."

With an angry look at the receding throng, suddenly grown quite quiet, Abelard bent down and picked Becky's drenched still body out of the basin. "Stand clear," he ordered seriously and he stepped forward. "And go home, a-all of you. This party's over."

When Becky came to she was lying, wrapped in a sheet, on a couch in the apartment.

"Just a b-bump and a shock," sa't a kind voice beside her. "As soon as your clothes d-d-dry my car will take you home. You'll be all right by m-morning. Only I can't apologize enough for b-being responsible."

"Nobody was responsible but me," said Becky. "I shouldn't of tried to hold out. I didn't have a cold really. It was just that it was my only evening dress, see?"

Abelard reflected ironically upon the priceless gowns that had been ruined. Indifferently, that night. "Poor child," he said, "isn't used to m-m-midnight revels, is it?" Becky shook her head. She rarely went out at all, she explained Abelard asked: "Didn't you get lonely then, or bored?"

She nodded vigorously. "Sure. I wanta play like anybody else. But when I hear these girls like, now Vincent, talking about what goes on at these parties, it makes me sick. So up to now I've let my conscience be my guide, and I'll say it hasn't guided me into much fun."

"Well, I'll make you a p-promise," said Abelard. "Any time you want to come here you'll b-be under no own eye. My s-pecial protegee, you see? Let-let that be my atonement."

"F-fellow called Estabrook. You wouldn't like him, child. The very w-word chorus girl is anathema to him."

"A what's that? What's an anathma?"

Abelard smiled. "Oh . . . a curse, chi-chchild, or some such thing." Then he rose, for a Japanese servant had appeared in the doorway and announced gravely:

"Your best friend . . ." she tried to be casual. "Whoa!"

"Mi'sieh's clo'es are dry."

Tomorrow—Becky meets the man of her dreams.

MAURINE IS MORE THAN PLEASED WITH MEMENTO

She was gonna OI' comma so happy!

Many a modern young woman would have been annoyed in Maurine's place. There she sat with the baby—a gift from the wife of her old sweetheart. Maurine rocked vigorously for a few moments, eyes wide open and a faint smile on her lips.

"A solemn silence fell upon the scene."

What was Maurine thinking? We shall see.

"Oh, at last
This infant, who in that
Unclothed state,
Had called my soul such
Great, was now mine own.
Through all the lonely coming years to be Mine own to cherish—wholly mine alone."

What could be sweeter than Maurine's attitude? Here she had a souvenir of Vivian Dangerfield . . . and what a souvenir! When the sleeping babe reached up and grasped Maurine's glasses, giving them a sudden tug, and breaking the tiny gold chain which held them to the reel pinned to her shirtwaist, Maurine was slightly annoyed. But she only smiled, and looked with adoring eyes at Vivian, who, by this time, was doing card tricks. Suddenly . . .

AUCTION BRIDGE

The World's Greatest Authority

HAND NO. 160

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In Monday's issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mrs. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

West, with minimum strength for a four-card suit bid, makes an introductory bid of one Club, which East improves with a bid of No Trump.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. With the Heart lead coming up to him, Declarer can count eight positive tricks, one short of game. The only cards that can possibly take an additional trick are the Jack of Spades and the Jack of Diamonds. A possible trick with one of these cards may be obtained only by dropping or killing a higher honor in one of the adversaries' hands. Such eventuality is normally remote. East's only hope for the ninth trick lies in forcing discards that might lead to the unguarding of an honor held in one or other of these suits.

Trick 6. The Club suit exhausted and no illuminating discards having been made, Declarer puts South in with a Heart to force North to further discarding. South's opening with the 3 of Hearts showed four of the suit originally held, and hence three in North's hand, of which one has been played and one discarded. North, therefore, as Hearts are played, must make two more discards.

Trick 8. North discards his 10 of Diamonds in order to retain protection for his Queen of Spades.

Trick 9. North's discard of the 10 of Diamonds, evidently forced, and his previous discards of the 3 and 7 of Spades, clearly indicate the original holding of a long Spade suit and of one or both of the outstanding high Diamond honors. South concludes that a Diamond lead through Dummy's Ace would be preferable to a Spade lead, especially as North, by his discards of Spade in natural order, has made no call for the Spade lead.

Trick 10. Declarer, placing North with the King of Diamonds alone, leads another Diamond from Dummy and establishes the Jack in Declarer's hand, giving him the trick needed for game.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write to him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

DO YOU KNOW THAT---

"Kissing is a custom entirely foreign to Japan, and it is undesirable that it should be introduced into our country. It is uncleanly, immodest, indecorous, ungraceful and likely to cause the spread of disease." So reads a statement issued by the prefect of police in Tokio.

When Austria became a republic in November, 1918, hydroelectric development in that country totaled 170,000-horse power, which increased 33 per cent. to 451,000-horse power by the end of 1926. This additional development was largely the work of the past five years.

Boulder, Colo., is planning to use melting ice from a glacier to supplement its water supply?

Enough cement was used in the United States last year to have built thirty-four reproductions of the great pyramid of Egypt?

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

IT is estimated that there are over half a million saxophone players in this country. Five hundred thousand more are disturbing our peace in some other way.

IT'S getting so that we long for the good old-fashioned cats that used to keep us awake at night.

A CAT only has nine lives, but a saxophone player lives indefinitely.

MAGAZINE advertisements claim that these fellows are constantly being asked out. This is showing them too much courtesy; they should be thrown out.

THERE are only two popular wind instruments on the market. Electric fans and vacuum cleaners.

BOSTON has thousands of budding geniuses and it's a shame that they can't be nipped in the bud.

ONE man is so good he can play with his eyes closed.

IT would be better if he could do it with his mouth closed.

HE was an infant prodigy. When he was five years old he used to render claxon solos on a flivver.

HIS parents sent him to Detroit for his lessons.

AND in three months he was able to play any siren in the Ford plant.

A REAL artist likes to keep his talent a secret. Gabriel is the world's greatest musician and nobody ever heard him blow his horn.

IT'S funny so many people will spend a lifetime studying the saxophone when they know that they'll eventually have to switch to a harp.

THERE are no saxophones in Paradise. That's why it's Heaven.

YOU'VE got to give St. Peter credit, he certainly knows his musical instruments.

HE had to do something to attract the tourists.

THIS is a free country and a man can do what he likes with his throat, except to use it for drinking.

THERE is no law against saxophones, but give a player enough wind and sooner or later he'll blow his brains out.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

ALAS, no girl knows the thrill of being "kissed unexpectedly," these days!

* * *

The two qualities essential to every friendship are loyalty and perfect understanding. Add TENDERNESS, and you have love.

* * *

Before marriage, a lover says, "Darling, what can I DO to make you happy?" After marriage, he says, "Well, NOW, what is it you want?"

* * *

The first sign of love, in a man, is his willingness to quarrel with you. As long as he is flatteringly agreeable and polite, he may not be serious—but where there's strife, there's hope!

* * *

In love, says a psychologist, all women are looking for somebody to LEAN on. But, dear me, the busy business girl, who earns more money than her husband and can strap a trunk better than her brother, must have to lean over a long way to beach her "sturdy oak."

* * *

When a man shows a desire to nail a woman to a pedestal, and leave her there while he trots off for a little excursion along the downward path, it's a sign he loves her. "You-stay-there-till-I-come-back!" he says in effect. "Boys will be boys—but girls must be "good examples."

* * *

Ah yes, Clarissa, all men keep the breakfast waiting, just on principle, if for nothing else—or perhaps to show their authority.

* * *

Oh, who'd have a heart for love or laughter,
If we counted the cost and reckoned the score—
And always thought of "the morning after"
In the midst of the glorious night before"!

DON'T TAKE ALL THE CREDIT FOR SUCCESS

YOU may be giving yourself too much credit for the success that you have attained.

You may in procuring your success be drawing upon a supply which you had nothing whatever to do with.

That supply may be the better instruction you have had at home due to the ability of your father and mother to impart their superior educational advantages.

When you compare the progress you have made in a given time with that of some others who have tried but not succeeded, you have not taken into account an unusual home environment.

It is not to your credit that you have gone to fine schools because your parents have insisted on your taking advantage of education.

It may be because the other boy's parents did not insist or could not afford to send him to as good schools that he has not outdistanced you.

Before you get far in thinking yourself so superior to others it might be well for you to make a few comparisons of early opportunities.

TEACHING CHILDREN

By L. LAMAR MATTHEWS.

THE pupils in Miss Herbert's class look forward to the story that is part of their daily programme. There is no set period for this diversion; but some time during the school day, when there is a little time to spare or when the children seem tired or restless, Miss Herbert permits them to put their books away and listen to a story.

The teacher always knows a new story and she tells it well. The definite purpose of the narrative is to teach a lesson, to point a moral; but the lesson is cleverly disguised and the children swallow it in sugar-coated form, without any of the silent protests that usually accompany lectures.

One day she relates an incident that proves the value of honesty. Another time her story is about a boy or a girl who told a lie—and paid for it. One story will show the advantages of being cheerful and hopeful. The most popular tales are those which relate to fair play in sports. Some of the stories are true; some are fiction.

And because her pupils are ten, eleven and twelve years old, she tells stories about boys and girls who are fourteen, fifteen, sixteen years old. She has learned that they like those best. It makes them feel older and more important.

Occasionally she varies the program by calling on some child to tell a story. But she usually does the narrating, because she does not wish them to find out that she is using this method to teach anything. That would cause some of the children to lose interest; for it is just plain human nature to object to being improved.

Another thing that Miss Herbert does for her pupils is this:

At the top of the blackboard that faces the class she writes a "Thought for the Day." This message of inspiration, good cheer or helpfulness comes from the pen of some gifted writer who couches his thoughts in simple, forceful language that young people can grasp. There are several books of these valuable quotations which the teacher uses in gleaning these gems.

She never mentions the quotations. She never has. She merely writes one, two, three or four lines high up on the blackboard each morning and leaves it there all day. The quick glance of the wide-awake children naturally discover it first and their gaze attract the notice of the other pupils. Now the children look for the friendly message as soon as they are seated.

Some of the girls have begun the practice of copying down these inspired lines into their own note books. Just how great a force this one little device may prove in the formation of character among those children cannot be estimated.

One is reminded of the Biblical injunction to be "as wise as a serpent and as harmless as a dove." Of such is the kingdom of leadership.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

A Pale Young Prince

He Will Be King Some Day. Don't Envy Him

THE KING OF SPAIN'S SON

The business of being king is not what it was once. The power of the king has diminished, almost to the vanishing point, except among barbarous tribes. Yet the life of a king is about as dangerous as it ever was.

This young man, of pale, rather sad face, whose title is "the Prince of the Asturias," will one day succeed his father, Alfonso, as King of Spain.

The father has been shot at several times already. He smiles at each attempt on his life and says, "That is part of the business of being a king."

It is, unfortunately, nearly ALL the business of being a king nowadays.

Others write your speeches for you, make the laws, tell you what to do. About all that the king has to do is to change his clothes often, wear fine decorations that other kings send to him, wear many uniforms and try to please the people. Not much of a career compared with the days of Richard the Lion Hearted, who went traveling fighting in the Holy Land, or Louis the Eleventh, who built the great French Empire by humiliating the great nobles and establishing unity of weight, measures and money, or Henry the Eighth, of England, who did exactly as he pleased.

There is nothing to envy in the life of a modern king, a good deal of danger and little chance for glory.

Not Very Democratic

Congress Should Meet Soon After It Has Been Elected Instead of 13 Months Later

The Old Guard Republican leaders think that the President should not call Congress into session until its "regular" meeting time, the first Monday in December.

A new Congress was elected by the people last November Thirteen months later is early enough for it to assemble to carry out the legislative wishes of the people, in the opinion of the Old Guard.

That is all very well for people who believe in the autocratic theory of government. It is certainly not very democratic. In fact, it is the most undemocratic feature of our government that the "regular" thing is for an elected Congress not to meet until more than a year after the people voted it into office.

And that is not all. Under our system of government, the REJECTED Congress goes right on governing for three months, until the March 4 following election. That is, we elected a new Congress last November, but the old Congress met the first Monday in December and continued legislating until March 4, when it expired. In that old Congress were fifteen Senators whom the people failed to re-elect and forty-three Representatives whom the people failed to re-elect. That is, there were fifty-eight "lame ducks" down in Washington governing us.

The sensible, fair and democratic thing to do is to change our antiquated Congressional system based on the days when distant Representatives had to ride for months on horseback to get to Washington.

The democratic thing to do is to amend the Constitution and provide that the Congressmen and Senators who are elected in November shall take office on the first of the following January. That practice is universal in the Parliaments of other countries. If it had been in force in this country there would be no question of having to call an extra session of Congress to take care of the Mississippi flood victims. Congress would have been in session in April when the flood came.

This Constitutional Amendment, proposed by Senator Norris, must pass both houses of Congress, and then be ratified by three-fourths of the States. There is no open opposition to the measure, which in the last three Congresses has passed the Senate—the last time by a vote of 67 to 2. It would have passed the House if it could have been brought to a vote, but it has been kept off the floor by the small clique of Republican bosses who control legislation in that body.

Let's have the Norris amendment passed early at the next session of Congress, and sent for ratification by the forty-eight State Legislatures. It will do away with "lame ducks," short sessions, filibusters and other evils of the legislative jams in the short session which is inflicted upon us every two years. It will remove one of the great barriers to the expression of the popular will at Washington.

ALL DIPLOMATS ARE NOT POLITICAL

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE political diplomat is not the best representative of the country. His nationalism, or if you please his patriotism, gets in his road.

To be a diplomat you not only have to compromise and see the other fellow's point of view, but you have to have a consciousness, a world consciousness, which is lacking in most political appointees.

Whenever there is an international conference you may expect over-wise correspondents and newspapers to circulate reports that the representatives of our country, bland and childlike souls, are being taken in by the shrewd and crafty foreigners.

Every nation has its tradition that while it is simple and direct itself other nations are full of guile.

Approaching the conference in this spirit it is most difficult to come to conclusions, for conclusions are rarely reached unless all parties are willing to sacrifice a little.

The best diplomat represents commerce. That knows no nation and has no boundaries. The one thing that has no so-called patriotism or nationality is the desire to make money. This may be very low and vile, but just the same it is a surer foundation of peace than some of the more exalted sentiments.

The Louisville & Nashville, the Illinois Central and our railroads connecting the North and South have done more to cement the country after the rift of the Civil War than all of the efforts of political carpet-baggers.

It is proposed to use airplane routes between Tampico and other Mexican places and the United States. A successful issue of this enterprise promises more for mutual peace than anything Secretaries of State may do. The trouble is that Mexico is made up too much of highly isolated communities. They do not see the other man's point. When the commercial traveler with an airplane begins to visit these isolated places their views will enlarge.

The automobile probably has done more to unify the United States than any other agency. Quick transportation means unification and that means solidarity.

The greatest menace to the peace of the world is provincialism and if the airplane shall conquer this, in a measure, it will be our best diplomat.

Probably Lindbergh did more good in the way of spreading a friendly feeling to the United States in France than all of the efforts of statesmen.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Toil is the lot of all and bitter woe
The fate of many. —Bryant.

He who would be a good orator ought to be just, and skilled in the knowledge of things just. —Plato.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

RADIATING from Post Office square is a group of streets on which much of Boston's financial, insurance, industrial and investment business is done.

Some of the buildings along these streets—Pearl, Federal, Oliver, Water, Devonshire and the rest, are not imposing. Some of them are dull appearing and lifeless. Inside those uninteresting business buildings the pioneers of Boston business are gathered in their offices.

* * *

Some, like Bruce Wetmore, J. W. Hayden and W. A. McKenney have spent their lives in the daily battle of business and have seldom known relaxation. One leader in this district never takes a vacation. Although he is reputed to be worth several millions, his only treat is an automobile ride.

* * *

Another man, over seventy, leaves his chauffered car in Copley square and walks down to the office. This is his only exercise.

* * *

Characteristic of their sincerity is the manner in which they greet people not so rich in the world's goods. It is a part of the life of this district to see elevator men, the city and private police, the messengers and clerks greeted as warmly as the back presidents. The enthusiasm is genuine.

* * *

One young college graduate, working in a bank there, had not gotten the right spirit. He was extremely inquisitive and unnecessarily so. This was noticed by his superiors. He looked for another position. Recommendations were asked. The president of the bank wrote that "The young man was very attentive to small details."

* * *

Out in Arlington the new town safety posters are very effective in bringing home to drivers the automobile menace to children. Posters bear the words, "At three o'clock 4,000 children leave the schools." With the large volume of traffic through this town drivers must be careful.

* * *

Arlington is rich enough to afford a mayor, but it prefers to remain a town. With some 27,000 inhabitants it still depends upon the town meeting.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"A MAN'S work lasts from sun to sun, . But a woman's work is never done."

There's an ancient wheeze that every husband, since Adam, has heard reiterated, to his grief. And it's still going strong with our married ladies. In fact, it has acquired an added rancor in these days when the housekeeping female contrasts her dreary, dingy lot with the attractive appearance and program of the strong and professional woman. And from being a self-pitying whimper this phrase has become an organized complaint which is going far toward placing housekeeping on the black-list.

Is it true? Is a housewife's work never done?

I'm going to let Sally answer that question—in her own words. Sally's style is not editorial but it carries an amazing wallop. She did not expect to be quoted when she unburdened herself over our noon-time spinach. She had merely been having another row with her married cousin, with whom she lives, and she wanted to get it off her chest.

"I get so sicka hearing that girl beef around, I could yell," she confided. "The fact is, she's sitting pretty, but she doesn't know it. She and Pete have been married six years. It was a love match—they eloped when she was nineteen and he was twenty-two. And maybe they're in love yet—but you'd never guess it by listening to Mabel.

"Pete's got a good job with a contractor. They have a nice, even room bungalow—all modern conveniences, a roadster, and two kids. The kids are well and so are Mabel and Pete. Now, you'd think that was a good lay-out for a girl, wouldn't you? But honest, to hear her talk you'd think she was the worst abused female on the earth.

"She's always envying me and saying she wisht she had it as easy as I had. Talks about the free time I have and how I can keep myself up. Well, you're a working woman yourself, Elsie, so I guess you know how much free time we have 'n' how we get it. Honest, from the minute I get up in the morning until I flop at night I'm trying to make every minute do five minutes' work.

I've got everything planned out—I'd never get anything done if I didn't know just how long it takes me to manicure my nails and just when I'm going to do it. I've a certain time for reading the paper and a certain time for mending. Why, I even have my stockings in soaking while I take my bath.

"But Mabel, she never knows when she's going to do anything. Why, she's just as apt as not to lay off in the middle of the busiest morning and gossip an hour over a phone or read a magazine, or talk over the back fence. Then she wonders why she never gets anything done.

"Dinner's always late and then Pete gets sore. But she gets all burnt up if you tell her she wastes time and hasn't any system. And she'll tell you how she works from morning till night and never has a minute's rest! Why, Elsie, the best thing that girl can do is rest, only she never gets any good out of it, the way she manages.

"Honest, if I ran my office work the way she runs her home, I'd be fired within a week. Wives sure get by with murder."

That's Sally's answer. It may have important bearing on some of our modern problems. Think it over.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

SOMETIMES I marvel at the intricate and careful pattern the lantana shows, a loveliness so ordered and sedate, and yet as pleasing as the perfect rose. These patterns! Like an artist's rare design we find them etched on petal and on leaf, in artful fashioning of flower and vine; no pains too great, although their day be brief. In all we see the same vast skill prevails, in weed and tree, in grain and fruit and grass; the maker of the patterns never fails in birds or beasts that, silent-footed, pass. This much we see and from this much I glean a perfect pattern through the whole schemes runs, a perfect pattern though unguessed, unseen, from these lantana blossoms to the suns.
